Loyalists Hurl Back Powerful Fascist Thrusts

Government Troops, Fighting With Backs to Wall, Seek to Stave Off Franco's 'End of War' Drive to Barcelona; Loyalists Send Thousands More to Front.

(By United Press)

HENDAYE, French-Spanish Frontier—Loyalist military advices reported today that two powerful Insurgent thrusts toward Barcelona had been hurled back by government troops fighting with their backs to the wall in the Queralt and Collada mountains.

Although Insurgent messages to the frontier asserted that Rebel Gen. Francisco Franco's offensive continued to gain ground, the Loyalists reported that renewal of intensive attacks on the Sierra de Collada and the Sierra de Queralt had been repulsed.

Failure of the Nationalists to break through the newly established Loyalist lines halted the Franco drive toward the important communications town of Igualada, 30 miles from Barcelona.

Bitter fighting also was reported from the Cervera sector, northwest of the Sierra de Collada.

Italian and Spanish troops suffered heavy losses, the Loyalist dispatches reported, in attempts to advance Franco's front in the Cervera sector. At the same time, dispatches from both sides said that the rebel aerial and artillery bombardment in that sector, as well as elsewhere on the Catalan front, had been redoubled and that a "tremendous number" of tanks were taking part in the Franco offensive.

Still Hold Main Cities.

Government messages claimed that their offensive in southwestern Spain continued to gain ground although rebels still clung to the main cities of the important Monterrubio mining zone.

Official National dispatches asserted that the rebel advance continued throughout Catalonia but it appeared that Franco's forces were devoting most of their attention of consolidation of ground won in the last few days.

The rebel forces also claimed to be advancing along the road from Tarragona toward Barcelona but the advance was slow.

In Barcelona, thousands of men and boys from factories and offices were sent to work on new fortification lines.

Women were drafted into service in place of the men as the loyalist government sent all able-bodied men either to the fighting lines or the new defense works. Huge signs in Barcelona streets appealed to women to volunteer for men's work.

The nationalist drive on the loyalist capital had slowed, but only for the moment, partly due to stiffened loyalist resistance, partly to the near-exhaustion of the insurgent troops after 24 days of constant fighting since the start of their Catalonia offensive.

Franco Urges Surrender.

Gen. Franco had issued a proclamation appealing to loyalist soldiers to surrender and asserting that their case was hopeless. The Loyalists presumably did not agree. They began intensive work on two separate fortification lines running roughly north to south, west of Barcelona.

BIRTHS INCREASE

Last Month's New Arrivals Second High for Year.

Births in Mansfield during December were the second highest of the year, health department records revealed today.

In all, 69 births were recorded last month as compared with 56 for November. The high month for the year was March, when 84 were born.

Deaths within the city also showed a slight increase in December, when 45 were recorded. The greatest number of deaths in any one month in 1938 was in August when 49 died.

Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, said that figures on the birth and death rates for the past year were not available, but will be included in the annual report which he is now preparing and which he hopes to present to the board of health at its next regular meeting.

MEXICO CITY—(AP)—Frank L. Kluckhohn, Mexico City correspondent for the New York Times, is under orders from the department of interior to leave the country by tonight.

FRANKFURTER WINS FINAL OK

Senate Confirms Harvard Law Professor for Seat in U. S. Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate confirmed today the nomination of Felix Frankfurter to be an associate justice of the supreme court.

The liberal Harvard law school professor was nominated for the high court by President Roosevelt to fill the vacancy created last year by the death of Benjamin N. Cardozo.

The action came without debate. Republicans said they had agreed in an advance caucus not to oppose the nomination.

It was confirmed without a record vote.

Senator Neely (D., W. Va.) made the motion for confirmation.

No "no" votes were audible on the voice vote.

About 50 senators were in their seats at the time.

The senate immediately turned to the nomination of Frank Murphy to be attorney general and Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) arose to protest confirmation.

"A long time ago a president of the United States said the measure of a man was not what he says but what he does," the Republican said, as he started a detailed recital of Murphy's legal career.

Strong minority party opposition developed, meanwhile, to confirmation of Harry L. Hopkins as secretary of commerce. Hopkins' nomination comes before the full senate commerce committee tomorrow for expected approval and probably will be taken up by the senate later in the week.

NAZIS TO HELP, DUCE ASSURED

Germany Will Back Italy On Spanish Dispute, Berlin Says.

BERLIN—(INS)—Nazi Germany will back any action taken by Premier Mussolini should he reach the conclusion that the Spanish non-intervention policy has been violated by a third power, it was hinted in authoritative circles here today.

"Italy's strong attitude regarding attempts by certain French circles to bring about increased aid to Red (Government) Spain is fully shared here," a competent observer said.

"Mussolini's postion is that he will consider himself free to act and declare the non-intervention policy closed and bankrupt if in the near future a new situation arises through action of governments befriending the Spanish government."

ASKS $10,000 TO CONTINUE WATER PLANS

Council Committee to Request Funds for Development Program This Year.

Project to Cost $22,000; Two Miles of Main Extensions Drafted by Engineer.

City council at its February meeting will be asked by the finance committee to appropriate $10,000 from the waterworks department surplus to finance the major portion of the city's share of a contemplated $22,000 water development program for 1939.

Plans for nearly two miles of main extensions are already being prepared by City-WPA Engineer Glenn Weller and are expected to be presented to state WPA headquarters for its approval within a few weeks.

Affects Four Streets.

Tentative extensions drafted by city council's water and finance committees call for the laying of 8,260 feet of six- and eight-inch mains on four city streets.

Of the total cost of the project, the city's share is estimated at $11,500, while the federal government will be asked to provide $10,700 for labor.

Weller said the proposed improvements would furnish employment for 80 WPA workers for a period of two months.

Urges Passage.

Fred Miller, chairman of council's finance committee, said he would recommend to council the passage of an ordinance authorizing the appropriation. He said it was "quite probable" that the measure would be presented at the next regular meeting.

Proposed extensions include:

Woodland road from Andover road to Cline avenue, 5,400 feet of eight inch main, city's share estimated at $8,000, WPA $7,000; Braeburn from Dickson parkway to Woodland road, 500 feet of six-inch extensions, city's share $600, WPA $500; Fifth avenue, Orange street to Grace street, 1,650 feet six-inch pipe, city's share $2,000, WPA $2,200; Lincoln avenue from South Diamond street to the end of the street, 710 feet of six-inch main, city's share $900 and WPA $1,000.

The Woodland road line was originally a part of the recently completed Woodland water improvement but was sliced from the project when council trimmed the proposed $90,000 project to a $75,000 figure last year because of limited finances.

The contemplated extensions, which already have the approval of WPA officials in Washington, are a part of the comprehensive improvements in the system designed by former city designing engineer Alvin M. Mock.

HE WAS TOUGH!

Nevada Killer Fights Death Fumes for 17½ Minutes.

CARSON CITY, Nev.—(U.P.)—Dominicio Nadal, the "roughest, toughest" prisoner who ever occupied death row in the Nevada penitentiary, proved his toughness when he was executed today in the lethal gas chamber.

It was 17½ minutes from the time the deadly hydro-cyanide gas fumes curled about his head until he died. Death ordinarily comes more quickly.

"Nadal said he was tough and he proved it," Warden William Lewis said. "His heart action continued for 17½ minutes after he received his first whiff of the fumes. As far as I know this is the longest ever recorded by a stethescope in a gas execution."

Kidnaped As Child By Indians, She Finds Family After 42 Years

Life of Leesville Woman Rivals Western Movie For Thrills.

By JANE WILLIAMS

TO LOOK at her, with her blue eyes and soft brown hair, you'd never guess that she was one-quarter Cherokee, that she had lived in a wigwam village . . .

And you'd certainly never guess that this quiet Crawford county woman's life has been as unbelievably thrilling as the wildest western movie '. . . That she was a kidnaped child . . . that she was raised in an Indian village and remembers very well the fierce, wrinkled little warrior, Geronimo . . . that she found her family only a little while ago after 42 years of separation . . .

Because Mrs. H. A. Lockhart, Leesville, a few miles west of Crestline, wife of a well-known, prosperous farmer, has lived in this vicinity for 25 years, and had been resigned for many years to the fact that she would never find any of her people.

* * *

Last year at this time, she had no one related by blood ties—now she has three sisters and three brothers. The last of the brothers—the "baby brother" who had the measles at the time she was kidnaped—now a six-foot Alaskan, came to her home only recently, after the word reached him at his mining claim that the little sister lost almost a half century ago, had been found.

This story, which out-thrills a Buck Jones western film, began about 42 years ago at Ada, Indian Territory (now Oklahoma). A child about four or five years old was stolen from the Hutchins family by a band of wandering horse traders, who in turn traded her to a tribe of Indians.

The Indians, probably Apaches, were good to her and she grew up as one of them, moving frequently from place to place. She remembered only faintly the white-skinned brothers and sisters, but she had no idea how she came to the Indians, where she came from, nor any white men's names.

She saw white people infrequently, but when she did, she felt a strange kinship with them. Her Indian family moved often, for there were uprisings and frequently they went on the warpath, spurred on by the fierce little Chief Geronimo who came often to see them and sometimes wore his fearsome overcoat of human scalps.

But in the meantime her frantic parents and officials had sought everywhere for the missing child.

Brother and sister separated for 42 years were reunited in Mansfield recently when Mrs. H. C. Lockhart of Leesville met her brother, Dewey Hutchins, Alaskan prospector, at Union depot. The meeting ended a separation that began when the sister was kidnaped in the Indian Territory.

Electrocution Snaps 3-Year Plant Record

Westinghouse Employe Meets Death as He Touches Line.

The first fatal accident in three years and the second to occur at the Mansfield Westinghouse plant in the past 10 years today had claimed the life of a 27-year-old maintenance employe who was electrocuted yesterday afternoon while inspecting plumbing in the punch shop of the range and refrigerator division.

The victim was Joseph Brunn, 86 Poplar street, who plunged to his death from a 15-foot steel platform as he accidentally came in contact with an electric buss bar charged with 220 volts of alternating current. The bar, which is not insulated, carries current to various sections of the shop.

County Coroner Hugh C. Winbigler, called by Dr. O. H. Schettler, factory physician, said that Brunn's death had been caused by electrocution, although the man had sustained a skull fracture in the fall to the concrete floor.

Making Routine Inspection.

Officials at the plant today said that it was believed that Brunn had accidentally contacted the bar carrying the current while engaged in a routine inspection of overhead plumbing.

They pointed out that employes were required to shut off the current before going aloft, among the buss bars but for some reason, which they could not explain, Brunn, who had been employed in the maintenance department for five years, had failed to follow his past practices.

H. W. Arlin, supervisor of industrial relations at Westinghouse said the fatality was the second to be recorded here in the past 10 years. The other fatality occurred in 1935 when an employe died from injuries sustained from a fall from the top of a pile of refrigerator boxes.

Brunn's body was removed to the Wappner funeral home where it will remain until Wednesday when services will be held at 2 p. m. at the Christian Apostolic church, First and Mulberry streets. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

Besides his wife, Esther, and a three-year-old daughter, Helen Louise, Brunn is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brunn, sr., four brothers, Fred, jr., John, Adam and Ervin, and two sisters, Mrs. Theodore Theessen, and Mrs. Eugene Wieland, all of Mansfield.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Spurred by Gov. John W. Bricker's recommendation for overhauling the state's financial policies, Republican legislative leaders prepared today for speedy action on bills ending the practice of earmarking tax revenues for specific purposes.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Highway Director Robert S. Beightler abolished 227 additional jobs today as he faced a civil service fight in his effort to oust J. Matthew Carr, highway department personnel director.

Abolitions together with the firing of 56 welfare department employes and 21 tax commission employes, increased to 1,438 the total of discharges made by the new Republican administration of Gov. John W. Bricker.

Fire Loss $33,700 In '38, Second Lowest in 10 Years

Chief's Report Shows City Had 70 Fewer Blazes Than In 1937; Defective Wiring Most Common Cause.

Mansfield's fire loss in 1938—$33,700—came close to establishing a new record, the annual report of Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger showed today.

The loss was the second lowest figure recorded here in the past 10 years. In 1937 the total was $32,900, only $800 under last year's figures.

The report showed that there were 70 fewer fires in Mansfield during 1938 than in 1937, while the fire loss for the 217 blazes during the year dropped approximately 40 per cent from the $52,100 figure recorded two years ago.

Average Loss $155.

Last year the average loss per fire was $155, one of the lowest recorded in the history of the department, Chief Seeburger said. The average loss during 1937 was more than $200 per fire.

The per capita fire loss of 90 cents, Chief Seeburger said, also was one of the lowest per capita figures recorded in Mansfield in recent years.

The annual report covers only detailed information on the fires within the city and no damage is

AUSTIN, Tex. — (U.P.) — W. Lee O'Daniel, who became governor of Texas by singing for the radio a song entitled, "Pass the Biscuits, Pappy," takes the oath of office in the football stadium of the University of Texas today.

Ordinarily governors are inaugurated in the state house, but so many thousands were coming here to celebrate the occasion that the state house was not large enough and it was doubtful that the stadium, which seats 75,000, would be.

The oath of office will be administered by Chief Justice C. M. Cureton, of the state supreme court. O'Daniel will then lead school children in singing a song of his own composition, "Beautiful Texas."

His hill-billy band will participate later in the inaugural celebrations.

U. S. Calls Radio Stars To Testify At Benny's Trial

NEW YORK—(AP)—Four of the nation's best known radio stars have been subpoenaed by the government to testify at the smuggling trial of Jack Benny, movie and air comedian, set for a week from today.

The witnesses include George Burns and Gracie Allen, Jack Pearl, comedian, and Benny Baker, a singer on the Benny program.

Burns already has pleaded guilty to smuggling jewelry—the charge facing Benny—and Albert N. Chaperau, co-defendant with each, has admitted his guilt in both cases.

Chaperau, who posed as a commercial attache of the Nicaraguan government to gain diplomatic immunity, also has pleaded guilty to conspiring with Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, wife of a New York judge, to smuggle in Parisian finery. Mrs. Lauer pleaded guilty.

Invention Ends Radio Static, Professor At Columbia Claims

(By United Press)

NEW YORK — Columbia university announced today the invention of a radically new radio broadcasting system which completely eliminates static and other extreneous noises.

It involves new methods of transmission and requires specifically designed receiving sets with a much shorter wave range—from 10 meters down to possibly one meter.

Broadcast will start in the spring over an experimental station operated by Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, professor of electrical engineering at Columbia and inventor of the new system.

General Electric company already is making receiving sets required for the new system, the university announced. In large quantities they will cost not much more than the types in current use. The new sets will be able to receive both the new and old types of broadcasts.

To the industry, the system presents as radical a department as the substitution of alternating for direct current electricity. To the layman, it means the elimination of static, tube noises or other interference, regardless of weather conditions.

The new system also will open a vast new range of wave lengths, possibly enough for 1,500 broadcasting stations.

Westinghouse Operations At 90 Per Cent, Hit 2-Year High

A new optimistic note was sounded in Mansfield industry today with the announcement by Westinghouse officials that production levels at the plant had soared to a two-year high.

Paced by a steady production gain during the past 60 days, operations at the plant have increased from 39 per cent to 90 per cent capacity.

Coupled with the increased production is an employment gain which also has reached a new two-year high, topped only by a peak employment figure of 4,600 in March, 1937.

Officials said that 3,450 persons are now on the payroll at the plant. Of this number 2,700 are factory workers and 700 are salaried employes.

Production which was at a three-day a week schedule eight months ago had been restored to a full-time five-day a week schedule.

C. L. VanDerau, manager of manufacturing, said the increased work schedules were chiefly in the range and refrigerator lines which are ordinarily stepped up the first six months of the year to build up inventories of new models. He explained, however, that the decreased inventories which reached near depletion at the close of the last year because of the low production level maintained throughout 1938, had accounted for an added increase this year.

He pointed out that the gain in range and refrigerator production had more than taken up the slack in appliance production which normally falls off at this time of the year.

Young Wife Too Much Dominated

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've been married four years, and am only 23 years old. I've always been told by my friends that I'm good-looking, and I try to keep the home looking nice and pleasant. But my husband pays no attention to anything I do, never praises me, and instead sees only the flaws in what I do. Do you think this is sufficient reason for a divorce?

SICK-AT-HEART.

Not unless there is more to your story, my dear. Husbands aren't plentiful enough for that. If you know your husband to be steadily and hopelessly unfaithful to you, consult some wise friend to whom you can tell everything, and who may help along a reconciliation instead of a divorce.

But the truth of the matter probably is that your husband, like many others, takes his domestic happiness for granted, and simply forgets to tell you that you are lovely, and that he still adores you. A good idea would be for you to try and interest yourself in some outside activity — your church, an educational course of some kind, clubs. You will be happier, if you try not to regard him as your sole source of happiness.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Drat these hooks!" Mary exclaimed as I came into the room. "You'd think they could make them so that they would stay fastened."

She was struggling with one which evidently refused all coaxing, and did not look up until I put my hands over hers.

Her eyes opened wide and she grasped my wrists tightly.

"Never mind the hooks," she whispered. "What's up? Noel?"

"He heard you speak about your dance costume just now," I said slowly, "and I don't believe—

"That he cottons to the idea of his beloved spouse appearing before her public in garb which would send her great grandmother into hysterics," Mary interrupted. "Notice that I didn't say grandmother. Granzie is a perfect peach about my dancing. I imagine she winces inwardly when she lamps me, but she keeps her precious old trap shut as tightly as if she were an especially secretive aged clam."

"Mary! Mary!" I expostulated in helpless laughter at her irreverence, but knowing that her characterization of Mother Graham's reaction to her dancing was correct.

"Poor Auntie Madge!" she said, patting me on the head as if I were a child with a stubbed toe, "what a time she does have with her bad little in-law! You know I'm not 'mistook in my judgments' though, don't you?"

"Yes, I know that," I said slowly.

"Then give me the low-down on my beloved husband," she retorted. "Is he kicking up active ructions, or is he just sulking like the well-known bear with the sore cranium?"

"Neither," I said, my risibles active despite my uneasiness. Then I recited Noel's brief comments to me, word for word. She listened attentively, and at the last word, gave a short, little laugh.

"We're in for it," she said. "I know my little Noel in that I-dare-you-to-please-me-m o o d. Heaven knows I've parsed it often enough. But we can't be gibbeted any higher if we're nice, big, woolly sheep than if we're tender little lambs. So when we conquer these hooks, suppose we go out and see what happens to us."

With fingers steadied by the contagion of her courage, I conquered the refractory hooks, and then, after a final, approving glance at her, I caught up the miniature mandolin on which I was wont to strum softly just enough of an accompaniment to her dancing to give audible rhythm to her perfect timing.

"Ready?" I asked with my hand on the door knob.

"And rarin' to go," she answered, with a little pirouette. Then, opening the door, I stepped aside that she might make an effective entrance into the room where Noel awaited us.

Cookies Know No Season

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

COOKIE time hasn't any specific season. It's always cookie time and the good cook takes pride in keeping a jar filled with cookies of her own making to complement the very excellent commercial product. There's hardly a respectable cookie that doesn't owe its charm to spice. Anise, ginger, cinnamon, whole and powdered cloves, nutmeg and mace are some of the popular spices. So the well-appointed kitchen has its shelf of spices kept in tightly-stoppered or sifter containers, fresh and flavorsome, waiting to give their all in the cause of good cooking. Now for some additions to the cookie jar.

Prune cream cookies require one and one-half cups each prunes and brown sugar, one-third cup shortening, two beaten eggs, one cup sour cream, one cup rolled oats, three cups all-purpose flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon soda and one-half teaspoon mace. Boil prunes in sufficent water to cover for 20 minutes; drain, remove pits and cut in pieces. Grind rolled oats. Cream sugar with shortening and add sour cream and beaten eggs. Combine with ground rolled oats and flour sifted with baking powder, soda and mace. Add prunes and beat thoroughly. Drop by small spoonfuls onto greased pan and bake 10 to 12 minutes in 425 degrees F. oven

Requested Recipe.

A Lebkuchen recipe is requested by several readers. We give it here for persons who may be interested in making a batch of these toothsome tidbits.

To make about seven dozen strips you will need three cups all-purpose flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon all-spice, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, six egg yolks, two cups sugar, one cup molasses, four squares unsweetened chocolate (four ounces), one-half cup chopped almonds, one-quarter cup finely-cut citron, one cup milk and four egg whites. Sift flour, measure, sift again with baking powder, cinnamon, allspice and cloves. Beat egg yolks till foamy. Add sugar and molasses gradually, then melted chocolate and almonds and citron. Add flour and milk alternately, beating after each addition. Fold in beaten egg whites. Pour in greased baking pans to three-eighth-inch thickness. Bake in 350 degree F oven for one hour or until done. Cool in pan; ice thinly and let harden. Cut into strips one by three inches.

Although small, the room gains a sense of spaciousness from the strategically placed plate glass mirror. The sectional divan is upholstered in one of the new homespuns in wine and tan, and has a tan leather trim. The coffee table has mirror glass tops with chromium trim and legs of light walnut to match the triangular bookcase. The carpet is a warm brown toning in with the upholstery of the divan. Unseen are two other chairs, one upholstered in tan leather matching that on the divan and another in wine velour and a walnut desk with tan leather top. The interior decoration department of your favorite store will be glad to help you in planning such a room at moderate cost.

KEEP CLEAN

After a comb or brush has been used give it a minute of swishing through a bowl of warm water containing a little ammonia or borax. Powder puffs should be washed every few days in sudsy warm water, half-dried by being pressed in a Turkish towel, fluffed up and set in the sun for a few minutes. Lipstick brushes should be wiped off with cleansing tissue before and after using while brow and lash brushes can be well cleaned if held under the full force of the hot water faucet a minute or two.

Examine closely the window ledge which holds your house plants. If drafts are present, you can usually eliminate them with a bit of weather stripping, or putty, or paint, and so protect the plants.

Light Lashes May Be Touched Up

By MME. QUI VIVE

Long dark curling eyelashes make a girl look mysteriously charming. Soul windows are more attractive when these hirsute valances are abundant, tip-tilted, dark as a raven's wing. Should it happen that yours do not qualify, make it a habit to friction them lightly every night with mineral oil. They love it. New fuzzers pop out, silky shafts grow longer.

Winkers that worry young hearts are those that are light colored. That's a trouble that can be made to evaporate. The crayon can be used.

Take your magnifying mirror—every woman ought to have one—place it on a window ledge where the light of day beats in. Let the upper lashes rest upon your finger, touch them lightly with the crayon, being careful not to come in contact with the flesh. It's not safe to try to darken the lower lashes unless they are fairly thick and long.

You may find mascara more convenient than the crayon. It comes in solid form. Dip the eyebrow brush in water, pass it over the mascara cake, fluff the brush over the finger as you do the pencil. Eyebrows can be treated with perfect success. The mascara must be exactly the right consistency, not too liquid, not too thick.

THEATERS

CLARK GABLE, who gets the best masculine role of the year — or several years—in "Gone With The Wind," has been called back to the studio to remake the final scenes of "Idiot's Delight" with Norma Shearer. It has been decided to have Miss Shearer drop her phoney Russian accent for the final love scenes, and she and Gable will sing "Abide With Me" instead of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." And it will be made clear that the two are to survive an air attack of bombing planes. Fans at a "sneak preview" are said to have demanded at least the ghost of a happy ending.

Doing Right Well.

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who is one of the merry, chiseling Carletons in "The Young In Heart" at the Madison, has been doing very well in his screen career since he gave up trying to be English. He was brought over from English studios to make "The Prisoner of Zenda," and since then has been constantly in demand, what with "Having A Wonderful Time," "Joy of Living" and "The Rage of Paris." His next assignment will be the title role in "Son of Monte Cristo." In his current film, he is featured with Janet Gaynor and Paulette Goddard.

Contributes to Drama.

Clinton Rosemond, the Negro actor who plays the old family slave in "Stand Up and Fight" contributes a poignant bit of drama to this tale of fighting and slave running in Maryland. He is one of the slaves who is sent by underground railway to the Pennsylvania boundary, but who is caught by slave runners and who is shot down when just a few miles from freedom. Robert Taylor, Wallace Beery and Florence Rice have the major roles. The film continues at the Ohio through Wednesday.

Drama at Ellis Island.

Ellis Island, onto which more human interest stories are crowded than any other place in the world, is the setting for most of the action of "Gateway," one of the Ritz features for Wednesday and Thursday. Don Ameche, New York newspaper reporter returning to the States, meets a beautiful Irish girl, Arline Whelan, who hopes to enter the country. "Campus Confessions" with Betty Crable, Eleanore Whitney and a cast of youthful newcomers is the second feature.

A Family Affair.

It takes 27 years of married life before James Gleason finds the courage to "tell off" his wife in "The Higgins Family," at the Park for one day—Wednesday. Everything happens to him and he's blamed for everything. Lucille Gleason is the wife and Russell Gleason is the son in this family story. Lynn Roberts is the daughter and Harry Davenport the grandpa. Gangland rides the highways in "Born To Be Wild," which will also be shown.

Princess and Cadet.

A princess from over the sea and a West Point cadet meet at a girls' school and fall in love, but before there is a happy ending in "Rosalie," there has been a revolution, a royal engagement and abdication. Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell, as the singing cadet and dancing princess, head a cast which includes Frank Morgan, Edna May Oliver, Ray Bolger, Billy Gilbert and others. This picture shares the Majestic bill with "Man Proof," a Myrna Loy-Franchot Tone film.

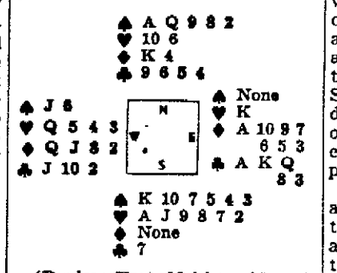
"The Authority on Authorities"

A LESSON IN ETHICS

PLAYERS WHO are inclined to be just a little bit unethical—which of course is just as bad as being completely so, in principle—are occasionally tripped up by their own crimes. Many operatives of a particular stripe like to do such things as hesitating for long study when possessing a singleton to play on the current trick. They think this is smart practise and is calculated to fool the enemy. If their effort succeeds only in fooling their own partners, they receive their just deserts.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East opened the action here with 1-Diamond. South bid 1-Spade, North leaped to 3-Spades, East called 4-Clubs, South 4-Spades, West 5-Diamonds, North 5-Spades, East 6-Diamonds, South 6-Spades and East doubled. North had so much confidence in his partner, the great old veteran Sidney S. Lenz, that he redoubled.

West led a diamond, for some reason the deuce, which was the deuce of a thing for East to read. Mr. Lenz played low from the dummy and East was puzzled, finally deciding to play the A, which was ruffed. Mr. Lenz next led to the spade A and Q, discarded his only club on the diamond K, then led the heart 10 from dummy. East studied nearly half a minute before he played the K. Mr. Lenz taking with the A and immediately leading the heart 2.

West decided that his partner's study had been due to holding the K and J, so ducked this trick and the heart 6 won. Thus an overtrick was made, for a grand slam on a hand which could have been defeated at a small slam contract.

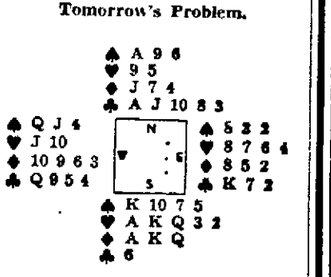
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

Against a lead of the diamond 10, what is South's safest play to make a 5-Heart contract?

Both Chippendale and Hepplewhite were practical cabinet makers.

BUILDERS AND SUPPLY HOUSES SEE BUSY YEAR

Officials of Mansfield Firms Predict Building Activity Will Follow Job Gains.

Optimistic business forecasts for 1939 and employment and wage increases will be reflected in increased home building activity in Mansfield and vicinity, Mansfield builders and supply dealers agree.

Indications at this early date point, they say, to an increase in home building activity here over the figure for 1938 when 129 building permits were issued for homes within the city's corporation limits.

In addition, there are evidences that building in developments on the city's edge will show an increase, while building in surrounding towns, more or less dormant during the past several years, will show an even larger increase they say.

Back of this prospective increase, Mansfield contractors indicate, is the steadiness of building supply prices and the stability of the labor supply market—building labor showing very little increase in cost while wages have risen.

Another bearish factor in the predicted increase in activity is the fact that wages, both locally and nationally, have shown an increase after mid-summer slumps. Higher wages and salaries means more security and more money to spend for home ownership.

Just what the building outlook in Mansfield is for 1939 is indicated below in exclusive News-Journal interviews with leaders in Mansfield's home construction industry as well as home furnishing and appliance firms.

ROBERT BLACK, Charles Hoffman Company—"The outlook for 1939 in the plumbing and heating industry is bright. Moderate prices and a demand for smart, efficient equipment undoubtedly will bring about a sizable increase in new and replacement installations during the year. To the home owner, this increasing demand for up-to-date equipment may bring a rise in cost of installation, unless he plans his modernization soon and starts actual work early this year."

PAUL SNYDER, National Electric Company—"All indications for 1939 in the electric fixtures and appliance field point to a sharp uptrend over 1939, with business approximating or exceeding the total for 1937. Evidences of the increase are already apparent in first-of-the-year buying which has been heavier this year than last. Another impetus to the business is the improvement in design, efficiency and comfort of the new 1939 models."

CHARLES SPARKS, R. B. Maxwell Company—"Our floor covering department anticipates a big increase during 1939 due to the belief that many home owners have delayed modernization until business conditions appeared more stable—as they do now. From the cellar to the third floor, color will be rampant in floor coverings, furnishings, drapes and walls."

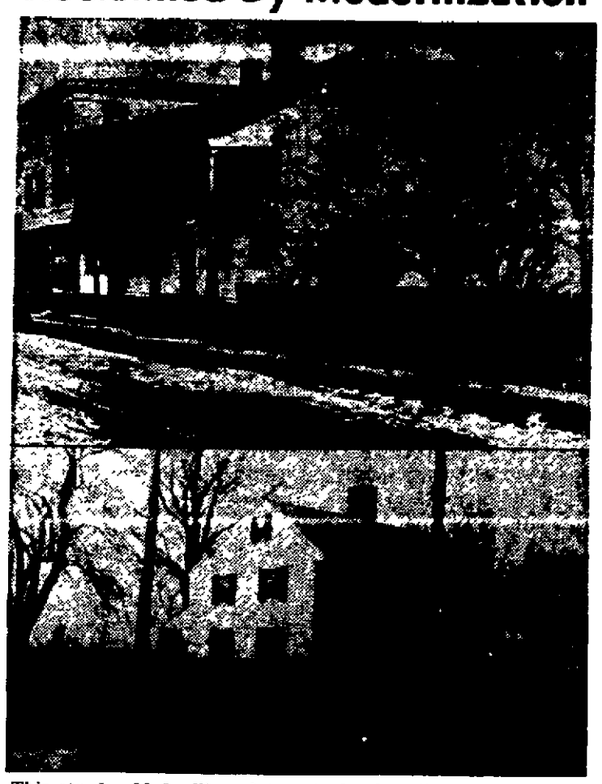
M. E. SCHMITZ, The Cement Products Company— "We, like others in the building and allied industries, look to 1939 for a good building year—one that may well equal the best years that Mansfield has had. Prospective home owners who plan to build early this year are doing the wise thing, too, by building before material prices rise and labor goes up. Right now they're able to build more house for less money than in recent years."

R. L. HENRY, Tinkey Lumber Company—"With building costs down, rents showing a tendency to rise and incomes showing an increase—whether wages or salary—indications are that the building trades will see another good year in 1939, perhaps even better than the figures for 1938. The fact that both materials and labor are down will tend to encourage home builders and remodelers to do their work early this year."

W. S. ROSS, Home Materials, Inc.—Now is the time for prospective home owners to build, we at Home Materials believe, because of the favorable prices of both materials and labor at the present time. While we would not go so far as to predict a building boom for Mansfield, there are indications on the surface right now that 1939 will see a continuation or extension of building activity to the extent we had in 1938—one of Mansfield's best building years."

CRESTLINE — John Chieppone of 524 W Bucyrus street, submitted to an operation at Emergency hospital Monday morning.

Reclaimed By Modernization



This sturdy old dwelling, dating well back to the early days of the 19th century, had been neglected to the point of virtual ruin. When a new owner bought the house, he spent some money on modernization with the result shown below.

Senate Economy Bloc Fights for New WPA Fund Slash

PLAN TO CHOP HOUSE BILL BY 125 MILLIONS

New Dealers Worried by Drive to Cut Fund to 600 Millions as Spending Curb.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A determined effort by senate economy advocates to cut the emergency relief fund below the house-approved $725,000,000 provided a new worry today for administration forces.

Chairman Glass (D., W. Va.) of the senate appropriations committee and his colleague, Senator Byrd (D., Va.), were reported seeking a reduction to $600,000,000 or less. Senator Harrison (D., Miss.) was among the influential members described as ready to back the $600,000,000 proposal.

Thus, before administration followers could try to restore the fund to the $875,000,000 originally asked by President Roosevelt, they had to fight for retention of the house total. They expressed confidence they could stop any further reduction.

Some of these pro-Roosevelt senators conferred with members of an appropriations subcommittee which was continuing hearings on the relief fund.

Harrington Recalled.

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, was recalled for further testimony, along with Mayor La Guardia of New York and President David Lasser of the Workers Alliance.

Lasser, whose organization is a union of WPA workers, has advocated an appropriation of $1,050,000,000.

Some subcommittee members predicted that proposals by Senator Hatch (D., N. M.) to restrict political activities of WPA employes would not be acted on until after the emgerency relief measure is out of the way.

It was learned, meanwhile, that Col. Harrington had expresed opposition to a provision in the house bill requiring that regional differentials in WPA pay for the same type of work be limited to 25 per cent.

Chairman Adams (D., Col.) of the subcommittee forecast that the provision would precipitate a hot fight on the senate floor.

With the house in recess, the senate decided to consider the nominations of Felix Frankfurter for the supreme court and Frank Murphy for attorney general. Republicans called a caucus to discuss the nominations, but Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.) expressed confidence they would be approved.

Military affairs committees in both the house and senate met in closed session to consider Mr. Roosevelt's defense recommendations. The house committee called Secretary Woodring, Gen. Malin Craig, army chief of staff, and other army officers to outline the program.

Famed Contralto To Give Concert In City Jan. 31

Two weeks from tonight Mansfield will be host to one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of all living women singers when Marian Anderson is presented by the Civic Music association at Senior High school auditorium.

The Negro contralto, who rose from a choir singer in the poor district of Philadelphia to become one of the few artists ever to command $3,000 for a single concert, is one of the biggest musical attractions ever booked for a Mansfield performance.

She will present a program of classical music, except one group which will be devoted to Negro spirituals.

Only persons holding membership tickets in the Civic Music association will have the opportunity to hear her. If the weather is favorable it is expected that the auditorium will be filled as several hundred association members from other cities are expected to come to Mansfield for the concert, Rev. D. N. Roller, president of the association, said.

Joseph T. Geiger's ability at pen sketching comes in very handy in his job as head of the Red Cross committee on Home and Farm Accident Prevention. He has made a series of pen drawings, which will be displayed in store windows, of causes of accidents in the home and on farms. He has depicted cluttered stair steps which cause falls, improper heating systems, carbon monoxide in closed garages, fire hazards in the home, cross animals on the farms, and the dangers of carelessly placed ladders.

Although basketball and bowling are now occupying the sports limelight, track coaches of high schools in Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana and Michigan this week will receive invitations for the annual Mansfield Relays to be held April 22 at Stadium Field. Yesterday Harry Mehock, track coach at Senior high school and founder of the Relays, placed in the mails 1,300 invitations and announcements of the Relays to high schools in the four states.

With only three of the five members present and two of them ready to hurry off to other engagements, the Mansfield school board conducted its session under difficulties last night. It was a trying ordeal for W. C. Mead, one of the members, whose daughter had just submitted to an operation in General hospital. But he sat through the meeting anyway. Harold Bruce, another member, and Supt. of Schools W. L. Miller, interrupted a dinner engagement for the session, then went back to the festivities. H. W. Arlin, president of the board, had no urgent engagement, but he arrived from Lima a half hour late for the meeting.

* * *

A rumor—untrue—that the first "edition" of new Jefferson nickels had been recalled and that the coins were worth as much as $50 apiece sent many a Mansfielder rushing through his pocketbook to see if he had one. Banks in the city had many calls asking for the new nickels, but the limited first supply has been exhausted. There will be more in later, however.

—AN ILL WIND

Sewer Backs Up, Gives High Pupils a 'Break.'

It's an ill wind that blows joy to no one, and while Senior high school officials were running a temperature yesterday afternoon over a clogged sewer, students were discreetly hilarious because it gave them an additional half hour of freedom from classes.

The obstreperous sewer sent water backing into the boiler rooms, making it impossible to operate the heating system properly and at 2:45 p. m.—a half hour before regular dismissal period—an announcement was made over the public address system that "school's out."

The trouble was located and repaired, and this morning the heating system was furnishing heat to all parts of the building, according to Principal Jesse Beer.

ITALIAN VETS RETURN MEDALS

Send World War Awards Back to France; Rome Papers Call It 'Spit in the Face.'

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Italian veterans today sent back French medals they won in the World war and some newspapers spoke of a "spit in the face" for France as bitterness against the neighbor across the Alps reached a new peak.

The Fascist extremist newspaper I' Teverse declared that 44,000,000 Italians "spit in the face of the third republic" which "patiently is wiping its face with sheets of its newspapers."

Brig. Gen. Silvio Lucco Mussino, retired officer of Turin, started the movement to return the medals by sending his Croix de Guerre to a Rome newspaper.

He proposed that Italian veterans send all their French decorations, to be returned to the president of France. The medals promptly began to pour in with letters expressing disgust at having "defended swinish France."

French disparagement of the Italian army and navy and a fascist belief that Paris was considering sending aid to the Spanish government in its civil struggle stirred the resentment.

Il Messaggero attacked a statement attributed to the Paris-Midi that "only imperious necessity can make Italian sailors lost sight of their native shore," which was published in all papers beneath indignant headlines.

"The 'imperious necessity' is about to become apparent," Il Messaggero said. "If provocations continue, other shores will be visited soon by sailors of his Italian Majesty."

PURCHASE OF LOT REMOVES LAST OBSTACLE FOR JUNIOR HIGH SITE

Purchase of a residence property at 242 West Fourth street today by the Mansfield board of education ended a three-months wrangle over the lot and removed the last obstacle in providing a site for the new John Simpson junior high school building.

The board paid $8,888.76 for the property which was bought from Misses Bertha and Emma Reinewald, sisters, who recently moved from the residence on the lot after repeatedly refusing to accept an offer of $8,500 for the property.

The purchase agreement averted court action to obtain the property and a possible delay in the construction of the new building. Condemnation proceedings had been ordered by the board when a compromise was reached.

The purchase price was $388 more than the board's original offer and $4,118 more than the tax value of the lot.

The agreement, however, gives the board a large frame residence on the lot which the William C. Hawkins Construction company, contractor for the new building, has agreed to buy for about $299. The previous offer did not include the house.

By accepting less than $300 for the house, the school board avoids the necessity of selling the residence on bids and a probable further delay in starting construction of the new school.

The deal was completed with Atty. J. W. Galbraith, counsel for the Reinewald sisters, administrators of the estate of the late Charles Reinewald.

Purchase of the property, located just west of the John Simpson school, gives the school board ownership of two lots adjoining the school property, and needed for the new structure which will extend approximately 100 feet beyond the old school. Another lot was purchased several weeks ago.

SOLVE LOOTING OF PAY BOXES ON N. Y. TRAINS

Railway Employes Held After Theft of 26,000,000 Nickels From Turnstiles.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—Eight men were arrested early today and charged with grand larceny and forgery in connection with the theft of $1,500,000 in nickels from the city-owned independent subway system.

Nine others were held as material witnesses at the district attorney's office after being questioned all night concerning their knowledge of the thefts which, investigators said, amounted to 26,000,000 nickels during the past three years.

The arrested men were:

Charles E. Cox, 33, Brooklyn, maintenance man; James McGovern, 28, Brooklyn, former station agent; Henry Aronstein, 33, Coney Island, station agent; Isadore Kodisow, Brooklyn, station agent; William F. Kuehl, 45, Brooklyn, maintenance man; George Walls, 37, Bronx; John H. Carlson, 45, Queens and David W. O'Brien, Queens.

Link 30 In Ring.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey said that at least 30 station agents, working in collusion with maintenance men, had each been looting the turnstiles of approximately $50 a day and that their thefts had amounted to three per cent of the independent subway system's gross business in the past three fiscal years.

Dewey said he was astounded by the scope of the operations and by the fact that the thieves were able to escape detection from the subway's own police force which specialized in catching persons who drop lead slugs into the turnstiles.

One of the men jailed, James McGovern, 28, had been a station agent until he "retired" about a year ago. The others identified themselves as Henry Aronstein, 33, a station agent; Isadore Kadisow, an agent, and Charles E. Cox, a maintenance man.

The method used by the thieves was described as follows:

Station agents would call the maintenance department and report a turnstile out of order. A mechanic would be sent to repair it. Using his special knowledge he would turn back the meter to show fewer fares than had been registered, and he and the station agent would divide the difference.

BOARD HIRES 3

Fills Two Teaching Vacancies, Names Secretary to Clerk.

Th Mansfield board of education today employed two replacement teachers for the Bowman school, a secretary for Dr. John H. Bristor, board clerk, and granted a leave of absence to a school janitor.

Teachers employed were Miss Martha Kindle, New Concord, and Miss Nelle Bumer, of Granville. They will fill vacancies caused by the resignation of Miss Jean Small, a teacher at the Bowman school, who was married recently, and a leave of absence granted Miss Josephine McFarland because of ill health.

A graduate of Muskingum college, Miss Kindle has had six years' teaching experience. Miss Bumer has a degree from Denison university and has taught five years. Both will begin work next semester.

Miss Mary Holmes, Mansfield, was employed as a full-time secretary to Dr. Bristor. He has had a part-time stenographer for several weeks.

Charles Wolfarth, school janitor, was granted a leave of absence extending to Feb. 15, because of ill health.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Married Women Continue To Howl About Pegler's Attitude On Their Jobs

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Many emphatic ladies have filed dissenting opinions on the recent proposal in these dispatches that employers and politicians with appointive jobs to award avoid hiring women whose husbands are employed. The suggestion is treated as radical, even Hitleresque, in careless disregard of the fact that it would add nothing to the conditions of hire which already exist. In fact there are existing conditions of eligibility imposed by some unions which are much more serious impairments of individual rights than the one proposed.

Employers in most lines already possess the right to select their employes and to discriminate without any obligation to explain matters to disappointed candidates. This right is being whittled down and eventually we may have a sort of civil service method of selection administered by labor organizations, possibly under government supervision. But in lines in which workers are selected singly or in small numbers the boss still can pick his employe, and it may be that already some companies give preference to unmarried women or to married women who are supporting families.

* * *

The boss may—and one hears that he sometimes does—turn away applicants for reason of religion, personal appearance or personal disfavor. He may turn down a superior individual and hire a mediocrity merely because the lucky number has been sent by a big customer with a letter of recommendation, wrapped around a section of lead pipe. It is often done. There are many familiar stories of the person who caught on for no other reason than that the boss liked the cut of his jib or the color of her eyes.

This being so—and surely nobody will deny that it is—the married woman whose husband has a job plainly would not be the victim of any new injustice. If it is unjust to permit the employer to give the job to a needier individual, that certainly does not come under the head of new business. True, that makes him the judge of need, but that is the way it is, nevertheless, and the way it has been always, yet, if he can obtain reliable information which leads him to select the head of a dependent family or a single-handed individual who must have a job in order to live, rejecting a woman whose husband has a good job, that discrimination is less harsh than other kinds.

True, as a strict matter of justice, the married woman whose husband has a job has a right to work for luxuries or merely to accumulate savings if she can get the job. But if she can't get the job, has she been wronged, and, if so, whom should she sue about that? It appears that any legal protection of her right not to be discriminated against because of her economic status would require the services of another government bureau to examine applicants for private employment and compel employers certified by an official administrator.

* * *

Under the closed shop and disguised closed shop agreements both men and women employes, regardless of qualifications, ability and need, may be blacklisted by unions which thus possess authority to issue or withhold licenses to work. This method creates job trusts in certain crafts which limit apprenticeships and close their rolls to new members, thus monopolizing the available work for a select number.

It is also possible, and the air of some union officials with political sympathies, to compel a reactionary Republican, for example, to join and pay dues to an organization which supports the New Deal and even to contribute money, through his dues, or work license fee, to a radical movement.

Such are restrictions and impositions already in practice, affecting both men and women, married and single, in harsh disregard for their rights and necessities of individuals who like to believe themselves free citizens.

Thus the married woman whose husband has an adequate job may be disqualified for employment and denied her precious right to buy luxuries or save money merely because she refuses to contribute part of her earnings to a political movement which in her patriotic opinion is a threat against the peace and stability of the nation.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—It's all clear now. Just what the public wants. Anybody can make money-making movies.

It's that annual Motion Picture Herald poll of money-making stars that tells how. The most inept conclusion-drawer in town should be able to draw a few pointed ones from the results.

Look at the kind of pictures the "first ten" played in to win their top spots, and make that kind of picture, to wit:

Shirley Temple—Sweet, wholesome, "family" stuff, with music and humor.

Clark Gable — Adventurous comedy, he-man drama well larded with laughs and romance.

Sonja Henie — Sweet, wholesome, young - love - and - clean-sports stuff, with fresh air.

Mickey Rooney — Family stuff, the Hardy series, adolescent love, comedy, dash of pathos.

Spencer Tracy — See Gable above ("Test Pilot") plus human, heart - throbby, he - man stuff ("Boys Town").

Myrna Loy—Light comedy, cute sophistication, with a spot of drama. The modern note.

Jane Withers — See Temple above, add rascality.

Alice Faye — Young love, and music.

Tyron Power — Young love—and young love.

Simple, isn't it? And do you note what's missing? Our old friend Sex! Not that it hurts, in fact it's practically essential, but it has to be polite. It's called Young Love.

I met old Apple Annie again the other day. They were calling her Drugstore Maggie, and she was in a picture called "Broadway Cavalier" but I knew May Robson just the same.

And I thought of doing a piece on how certain players keep on getting the same role in which they first clicked. But I happened to be talking to Pat O'Brien, who wasn't in the scene, and somebody mentioned that Pat had been doing all right by "The Front Page" ever since. And we thought of a few more like Cagney, and Wally Beery, and why go on?

Miss Juanita Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Field of Philadelphia, came to Hollywood because she wanted to escape the social routine. She wanted to do things, and she wanted especially to get away from it all, meaning the dances and dancing that went on back home.

She is playing a dancer at a glittering dance party.

Gene Reynold ("Boys Town," "Of Human Hearts," etc.) plays Douglas Corrigan as a 9-year-old, thus being the only age in "The Flying Irishman" in which Wrong Way does not portray himself.

To overcome Corrigan's objection that Gene is too handsome to be a Corrigan at any age, R-K-O gave the lad a cheapie haircut, bleached his hair and trimmed his long eyelashes—but only after obtaining special permission from M-G-M, Gene's parents and other copyright owners, plus a solemn promise to restore Gene to good-as-new condition.

Sports Continue to Dominate City Cage League Race

By CHARLES MARTIN

CITY CLASS A basketball officials last fall broke up the defending championship Yuncker Sports quintet in an effort to tighten the current title race, but, apparently they have failed.

For the crack Sports club is riding on the crest of a spectacular 13-game winning streak in City league play, and judging from the performance it turned in last night is going to be difficult to halt.

Manager Jimmy Breres' smooth-working outfit shares first place with the Westinghouse Electrics following the opening contests of the second round. But the style of play the Sports displayed at Mansfield high before a disappointing crowd in smothering Earl Herrick's Hi-Speeds, 41 to 27, establishes them as favorites to annex their second straight crown.

While the Yuncker outfit was chalking up a new team scoring record, the Electrics, paced by Harry Ross, tallied their triumph by edging a fighting Elks Lodge machine, 36 to 30, in an interesting affair.

Herrick's men had the misfortune of running into the Sports when they were hitting, and their chances of emerging with a win were slight.

With Johnny Reese and Hawk leading the way, Breres' courtiers jumped into a commanding lead in the opening minutes, and not once was the outcome doubtful.

The Hi-Speeds were at full strength, but their defense was not capable of halting the basket-making of the undefeated co-leaders. The Sports' fast-breaking attack enabled them to set up several under-the-basket shots, and when Herrick's team revised its play to halt that attack, the winners began connecting from the center of the court.

Yunckers' combine went ahead, 14 to 4, in the opening chapter, was leading, 21 to 9, at halftime, and increased its advantage to a 29 to 15 count going into the final frame.

Reese and Hawk tipped in 11 points apiece to set the individual tempo, while George Nana topped the losers with eight.

Strengthened by the addition of Ray Harmon and Franklin Zercker, former Ashland high stars, to the lineup, the Elks gave the Westies several uneasy minutes.

Tom Farrell did some brilliant rebounding in the opening half to enable the Lodgemen to remain in front, but Pilot George Percy's team put on a third-period rally to grab a lead it was able to protect to the final gun.

The Elks, led by Zercker, rattled the backboard with several midcourt shots in the closing minutes of the tussle to cut the Westies' lead to a 32 to 30 count, but with a minute to go a goal by Fritz Vogel and foul conversions by Bob Shade and Howard Poole gave the winners a four-point lead they protected to the finish with a clever stalling game.

Zercker, who looked impressive in his debut, collected nine points for his team, while Ross tied him for individual honors by leading the Electrics with a like number.

Chuckovits Fattens Scoring Total as T. U. Wins

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—The high flying Toledo university basketball team today held its first Ohio Conference victory of the season, a 51 to 38 decision over Baldwin-Wallace.

Chuck Chuckovits gathered five field goals and six points for a total of 16, only one point off his season's average, in the first of four conference games to be played by the Rockets this season. They take on Heidelberg at Tiffin Wednesday night.

Last night's effort sent Chuckovits total scoring for 12 games to 208, which averages 17.3 points per contest. Sophomore Frankie Baumholtz of Ohio U. has 161 points for nine games for an average of 18.20.

Ohio quints fared poorly Monday night in interstate competition. Ohio State was knocked from the unbeaten list in the Big Ten conference by Illinois, 45 to 31; Notre Dame conquered Western Reserve, 59 to 36; while Xavier fell before DePaul at Chicago, 38 to 30. All the games were played on out-of-state floors.

Tonight's schedule features clashes between Wooster and Mt. Union at Alliance and Cincinnati versus Marshall at Huntington, W. Va.

DEMPSEY PRESENTS HIS SIDE OF 'LONG COUNT' IN BATTLE WITH TUNNEY.

By OSCAR RUHL

News-Journal Sports Editor.

PERHAPS the most controversial point in the whole history of modern boxing, the famous "long count" in the second Dempsey-Tunney championship fight has finally been completed with detailed statements by both boxers.

Gene Tunney gave his version in an article in Collier's Weekly in 1932, and now Jack Dempsey, writing in the same magazine, presents his side, and the old "Manassa Mauler," apparently, is well satisfied that he did not regain the title on that eventful night in 1927.

Jack Dempsey

After describing the knockdown of Tunney in the seventh round, and the delay in the count because he failed to go to a neutral corner, Dempsey writes:

"When you have given your all in a sports competition you have only one thought and it's usually of rest. I did the human thing and thought only of rest. More than anything else in the world I wanted to stand still for an instant and relax long enough to take a deep breath in safety. The motion pictures show that I did just that. I leaned back against a convenient spot on the ropes and draped my arms over the top strand to enjoy the most welcome moment of relaxation a fighter ever knew.

"Tunney has said that he kept his wits during those fleeting seconds. If he actually did, he is more of a ring fighter than his record shows, because few people can be staggered against the ropes with a heavy right and, five seconds later, spilled to the deck with five more rights and lefts, and still be cagey enough to remember that the other guy must go to a neutral corner before the counting begins.

"It was a sickening sight to me to see Tunney grab that rope, pick up the belated count and pull himself to an upright position. I felt like the unluckiest guy on earth at that moment.

"Today, eleven years later, I feel that I was most fortunate of all the world's able-bodied citizens. For, if Gene Tunney had remained on the canvas, the whole course of my life would have been changed, and for the worse, I am certain. Had Tunney remained on the floor in Chicago, I would have been hailed as a 'superman' of the ring Money would have been showered my way by the bucketful. Clamor of the public and press would have guaranteed $3,000,000 for another Tunney-Dempsey battle.

* * *

"AND nine months later I would have been in the ring taking a third straight beating (Dempsey describes the Tunney fights as the only real 'shellackings' he ever took) a million dollar beating win or lose; for, being the most studious and determined of all fighters, Tunney had perfected a defense and a counter-attack for the only fighting style I knew.

"Defeated, I believed it wise to stop fighting. The reasoning behind this decision was simple. I was firmly convinced that a body, after giving it and taking it for more than a third of its 32 years, could not be subjected to further punishment without risking and suffering permanent damage. Too many fighters refuse to realize this cruel fact."

In Tunney's story of the long count he stated that after he was knocked down, he picked up the referee's count at two, and figured out his campaign of defense and attack while waiting for the count of nine.

"Whether twenty-nine seconds or nine seconds had elapsed when the referee said 'nine'," he wrote, "would have made no difference to me. My signal to get off the ground was the count—nine. No box that I have ever known has carried a stop-watch on his wrist going into the ring."

City to Send Big Entry to Findlay Meet

Bowling Teams Asked to Enter at Meder Alleys.

One of the largest entries ever furnished by Mansfield for the Inter-City bowling tournament is expected to be sent to Findlay this year.

No entries have been filed as yet by Mansfield teams, according to Art Hilborn, a member of the tournament's board of directors, but he appeared confident that this year's entry would exceed the record number of quintets ever sent to an out-of-town tournament.

One of the reasons why Mansfield will be heavily represented in the Findlay competition is because the city has bid for the 1940 tournament.

This year's tournament will open March 4 and run until April 23, with virtually all of the bowling scheduled for week-ends. The tournament committee is attempting to lineup 300 teams to break the record of 251 set in the 1936 Tiffin tourney.

The deadline for entries is Feb. 16, and they must be filed at the Meder Recreation alleys before then, Hilborn stated.

Teams with game averages of 650 or less may compete in the Booster's division. Their scores will also be eligible for regular tournament prizes, Hilborn said.

Tyger Mermen Go to Wooster

Seek Second Victory Over Generals Saturday.

Two defeats in a row have had no discouraging effect on the morale of the Mansfield high school swimming team, Coach Harold Burns believes.

The team is one of the most promising to wear Mansfield livery in quite some time, but it has been handicapped by the lack of experience.

The Tyger tankmen have shown gradual improvement, but have found it difficult to win because of the class of the opposition.

Mansfield goes to Wooster Saturday for its next dual meet, and victory prospects appear rather bright. It was against the Generals that the Tygers broke into the win column this season.

Reformatory Five Whips Mt. Vernon

The Reformatory cagers again encountered little trouble in finding the basket yesterday as they trounced the Pittsburgh Plate Glass five of Mt. Vernon, 61 to 36 at the institution. The inmates led 26 to 10 at the half. Price led O. S. R. with 17 points

Big Ten Cage Race Tightens

Wildcats Halt Gophers; Bucks Bow, 45 to 31.

CHICAGO—(AP)—A battle royal with every team packing a "knockout punch"—that's the way the Big Ten basketball title scramble shaped up today.

Minnesota, the club which had won three straight games in impressive style, attempted to figure out "how come" that stunning upset defeat the Gophers took last night at the hands of lowly Northwestern.

Also Wisconsin upset Michigan and Illinois knocked Ohio State out of the undefeated class, indicating that the race will be a free-for-all battle to the finish.

Northwestern nosed Minnesota out 32 to 31 in a thriller which saw the score tied six times. At the halfway point the count was 16-16. It was Northwestern's first conference win in four starts.

Jamming its way into tie with Minnesota and Indiana for the leadership, Illinois downed Ohio State 45 to 31, handily winning its third game in four starts. Illinois led at halftime, 24 to 14.

Wisconsin bounced back from Saturday's drubbing by Indiana to surprise Michigan, 42 to 39. The Badgers led at the half, 20 to 18. Iowa, in winning its second title game in four starts, held Chicago scoreless during the last 14 minutes and won 29 to 19.

Purdue's champion Boilermakers, finding the going rougher than did their 1937-38 shotmakers, suffered a 39 to 36 defeat from Indiana's Hoosiers.

The Mansfield high school wrestling team, defeated in its only two starts, will seek its first victory on the home mat Saturday when it entertains the strong Columbus East grapplers. The Tyger matmen lost to Wadsworth last week.

Young Boosts Average, But Legion Drops Pair

Legionnaire Collects 623 Pins In Club League Match; Managers Tie Ex-Servicemen for Lead.

SHOOTING the only 600 score in the Club league, Brig Young of the American Legion moved into first place in the individual averages at the Meder alleys last night.

Young boosted his average to 199.70 with his 623 total, which he compiled from games of 214, 204 and 205. He led the Legionnaires to the high team count of 2731, but only one win was chalked up against the Kiwanians.

Failure to win more than one game enabled the Commercial Managers to roll into a tie for first place. The Managers took a pair of decisions from the Liederkranz club.

The Schoolmasters took two tilts from the Mansfield Savings Bank to step into third place ahead of the Liederkranz keglers.

In the other matches, the Mans-Athletic club added two wins at the expense of the J. A. C., Tracy & Avery won two from Baku Grotton and Page's Dairys took two from the Optimists.

SAFETY SIGNS

California Let's Motorist Know Safe Driving Speed.

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—(INS)—So motorists may know how fast they may safely negotiate a highway curve, the State of California is installing and testing a new system of road markers designating speeds at which curves may be rounded. The safe-speed sign, according to C. H. Purcell, state highway engineer, will be visible night and day and will indicate speed at which the curve can be taken under ordinary circumstances. All miles-per-hour signs will be in five-mile increments.

STOCKS REFLECT SERIOUSNESS OF SPANISH CRISIS

Pivotal Issues Back Away; Traders See Favorable Omen in Commerce Report.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Pivotal stocks continued to back away in today's market, although selling pressure was light throughout.

On the retreat were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, Illinois Central and DuPont.

The Spanish war crisis, with possibilities of serious European repercussions, was given as the principal reason for the moderate offerings.

U. S. government securities exhibited strength, apparently reflecting the economy move in congress. Commodities were uneven. Stocks in the Paris Bourse weakened and an easy tone developed in London.

Market followers saw a favorable omen in a compilation of the interstate commerce commission disclosing net operating income for Class 1 railroads in November totalled $49,664,681 compared with $32,519,097 in the same 1937 month.

Analysts studied federal reserve figures showing a further decline in commercial lending throughout the country.

CHAPTER I

You knew it was the bedroom of working girls because there were gloves and stockings drying on the radiator and on the desk was a shorthand pad containing letters Alix should be typing rather than going to a cocktail party with Eddie Barrett. There were twin four-poster beds with monogrammed green spreads, a dressing table with a voluminous chintz skirt and a glass top, and a highboy bought at an auction.

And sitting at the dressing table was Alix Barton putting an exciting perfume behind her ears. A slender, graceful girl, her hair was a blaze of light and a cluster of curls. She had a small crooked mouth and eyes that changed color. Her laughter had husky tones in it and more sensitive people thought her laughter warmly musical. She liked small, frivolous black hats, small, frivolous high-heeled slippers, and evening dresses without backs.

The extravagance of the new dress, a long green thing with a belt of gold, troubled her conscience a little. But when Eddie had called several nights ago inviting her to this particular party, she was in a quandary about clothes. Hence the new dress and the little black velvet turban with a veil.

She joined Tuck in the living-room furnished with odd, comfortable pieces—the green sofa that a recent bride, moving out of town, had sold at a ridiculously low figure, a dark red leather chair, a drop-leaf table, and several small tables and lamps.

"How do I look, Tuck?" she asked, turning around. "Nice enough for the dashing Don Lawrence and his elegant daughter, Nancy?"

Tuck Martin, who shared the apartment and the expenses, was a short, stout woman in her middle fifties with a sharp tongue and a warm heart. Her thick hair was a mixture of black and white and close cropped. Her eyes were brown, eyes that could flash indignantly one moment and be marvelously tender the next. For more than thirty years she had worked tirelessly as a social worker.

Two years ago she and Alix had met through a mutual friend and decided to set up housekeeping together. From the first Tuck and adored the girl who had come alone to the city from a small Maryland town when she was just sixteen and who, by study and sacrifice, had worked herself into the position as secretary.

And Alix, also from the first, had loved the plain-spoken woman who had given and who still gave so unsparingly of herself to the unfortunate people with whom her work brought her in contact.

Walking to the window, Alix looked down on the snow-covered court. Turning, she looked at Tuck who sat in the red leather chair beneath the lamp with a magazine on her lap.

"I've been thinking how lucky we are to have jobs and security and how happy we've been together," Alix said. She remembered the spoonful of room she had had at first, frigid in winter, torrid in summer, and the dreadful loneliness of the first two years. "I don't want anything to spoil this."

"If you fall in love," Tuck said, "it will be spoiled. And you will. How is it you haven't? So many girls fall in love with the idea of being in love."

* * *

Alix's vivid, crooked little mouth curved. Her eyes were thoughtful.

"I don't know. I might have fallin in love with love. But I want to fall in love with a man. I keep thinking that surely it will happen to me soon. I'll know when it does. At once."

Tuck chuckled. "You won't know. That's the trouble. It's like a disease. You don't know you've got it until it has you and then it's too late to do anything about it."

"No," Alix protested gently. "No, Tucky. It will be sudden and very sweet and rather violent. It'll unbalance me and shake me. I want it to be like that. It isn't Eddie. I don't want him to be in love with me and I'm afraid he is." She smiled. "I've come a long way to here, Tuck, and tonight I can say I'm really happy—except about Tod."

Tuck didn't want to think about Tod, Alix's wayward brother. She didn't want Alix to think about him tonight.

"Love doesn't make you happy," Tuck said. "Don't think it does. I don't want anything to do with it." She laughed sharply. "I want annuities, nice fat ones, to keep me in my old age."

Alix smiled again. "I want seven sons in my old age and the memory of having loved one man, just one man, with all my heart. And tonight I'm going to meet the much talked about Don Lawrence and his daughter Nancy. They're glamorous myths to me now. Rich people, society people are to girls like me."

* * *

The bell rang then and Alix opened the door. Eddie, a tall, pleasant-faced young man came in. His eyes approved warmly of Alix in the green dress and he smiled at Tuck. The several young men who came to take Alix to dinner, to parties or to pictures were fond of Tuck, remembered her at Christmas, and sometimes insisted that she go to the movies with them.

Eddie grinned. "Hi, Tuck. Don't you want to drink cocktails?"

"No, thanks. And Alix doesn't drink them. She told me she didn't."

When Alix came out of the bedroom, she was wearing Tuck's black seal coat. Leaning over, she kissed the older woman's smooth forehead and said. "I won't be late. Good night, dear."

It was snowing in small dry flakes when they came out of the apartment house and crossed the court to the street where Eddie's drafty yellow roadster waited.

"I guess you wonder," he said, placing a robe over her, "how I rate people like the Lawrences. Well, before the depression I was something of a playboy. I never thought I'd be working for twenty-five a week then. But the stock crash left my mother and me flat broke. Don and Nancy were among the few who didn't turn out to be fair-weather friends. They never stopped inviting me to their parties."

Alix turned her head. "You never told me this before, Eddie. But I think you've taken it on the chin beautifully. The depression didn't touch me. I didn't have anything to lose."

"You've heard about Don. His life is a pretty well-known story. He's been in scrapes and in the papers since his college days. He's a playboy who never grew up. Too much money and a weakness for beautiful women. Bernice, his wife, divorced him about six years ago. She had a little house in the country and Nancy spends part of the time with her father and part with her mother. The divorce was hard on Nancy. She's crazy about her parents. You'll like Nancy. She's swell."

* * *

Alix looked through the windshield at the gently falling snow.

"She made her debut two years ago. I read about it in the papers and the girls at the office talked about her clothes. It was the biggest party of the season. I never thought I'd meet her."

"Nothing snobbish about her," Eddie said. "She's got everything but she isn't happy because of the break-up of her parents. Has a notion they ought to make it up and marry again. There's not a chance of that." He looked at her and grinned again. "You know, I'm crazy to take you where you'll meet Don and Kurt. Kurt Deering. Now there's a man for you."

Alix laughed. "One at a time, please. Who is he? I don't get around much, you know. I don't know any of these people. But I like his name. Kurt Deering."

Eddie said, "Men like him and women fall for him. He's an architect and a good one. And tall, dark, and handsome."

"But I don't like perfect people, Eddie." He must be conceited.

"He isn't. " He opened the car door, helped her out, and walked down the street in the snow. He stopped to light a cigaret. "He got me my job when I thought I'd have to go on relief, and he paid my mother's train fare to Chicago when she went there to live with my aunt. That's the kind of guy he is. And he stops around every now and then to see how I'm doing."

"Is he married?"

He laughed. "Interested already! What did I tell you? No, he isn't married. If he likes you, he doesn't care if you're a ditch-digger of a millionaire."

Alix nodded. "I'll be looking for this paragon."

Eddie said, "Maybe the last laugh will be on you."

They passed through a sumptuously furnished lobby to the elevator. A few moments later Eddie knocked at the apartment door and a servant admitted them.

Alix stood still, her eyes excited at the scene before her. The long room was furnished in the modern manner. A round white coffee table on a small white fur rug caught her attention. Large round mirrors. Venetian blinds shut out the snowy street scene. Three servants with trays moved through groups of beautifully dressed people. The music from the radio was drowsily sweet.

When a small girl with brown hair parted demurely in the middle, a girl in blue velvet with four gardenias across her shoulder came toward them, Alix knew she was Nancy Lawrence. No longer was she a glamorous myth but a sweet-faced girl.

Eddie introduced them. Nancy said, smiling, "Go and get yourself something to eat and drink, Eddie. I'm so glad you came, so glad you brought Alix."

When Eddie left, she took Alix into her bedroom and sat on the chaise-lounge while Alix took her compact and lipstick from the small black suede bag.

"Eddie has told me all about you," she said in her clear sweet voice. "I'm always glad to meet people who do things, who work. So few of the people I know do. And they're so bored. You don't look bored." Her bright blue eyes looked at Alix candidly through the mirror. "I hope we see a lot of each other. I don't know why Eddie didn't bring you up sooner." Then she said, "Wait'll father sees you! He has a weakness for beautiful blondes. Every girl in his office is a blond except Sally, his secretary."

And Alix thought her eyes amused and excited, "I wonder if Kurt Deering is here. I wonder if he has a weakness for blondes."

They went into the large room again and Nancy introduced her to the other guests. And when a tall man with blond hair and a clipped blond military mustache came toward her, Alix knew she was about to meet Don Lawrence.

* * *

But before he reached her, Kurt Deering intervened. Yes, tall, dark, and handsome as Eddie had said. And lean and broad-shouldered and with a mouth too young to wear the bitterness it wore. Oh, no, she would never forget this first meeting with Kurt who had appeared suddenly in the center of the room looking down on her with a mouth not bitter but charming and amusing when he smiled.

Her mouth was tremulous, her eyes more alive. Because in an instant she knew why she did not love Eddie or any of the others. Because one Sunday afternoon about 5 in March Kurt Deering was to appear suddenly out of nowhere and look down on her and smile and speak.

Love at first sight, it was called. It seemed absurd. Yet it happened every day. It was the sweetest way for it to happen. Every day girls met men and thought instantly, "I don't know anything about you but I'm going to be in love with you."

"You've neglected me," he said "I thought I knew every one, but I don't."

When Nancy introduced them, their hands touched briefly. Alix thought, "Why has this happened to me with you? Is it because you are handsome and have strength and charm? I don't suppose you ever really know why."

She never knew how it happened that suddenly she was alone with him.

"The food and drinks are always good here," he said. "Let's help ourselves."

They went into the dining room. Looking at her over burning amber candles, he said. "Eddie's told me about you, Alix."

It was absurd for her hands to shake so because she was alone in a warm dim room with this strange man. But had she not said just a little while ago that it would shake her and unbalance her?

"Has he?" she asked. "For a moment I was a little uncomfortable not knowing anybody. And I seem to be the only one of my kind here. A working girl."

He smiled. "Not afraid, are you? Never be afraid of anything. If you want something, go after it and get it."

She looked at him, her lashes sweeping upward, her eyes as golden and as warm as the tips of the amber candles.

"Do you do that in all your dealings?"

His smile was crooked, too. "Except in my dealings with women. You can't apply rules to women."

They smiled at each other. Then Alix thought, "Kurt Deering is your name. I've thought about you so much, not knowing your name, or where you were or how I'd meet you."

Kurt asked, "May I say the night after tomorrow night? Dinner?"

She nodded. "The night after tomorrow night," she said just as a servant carrying a tray of empty glasses opened the door and came in.

People were beginning to leave. Joining Eddie, Alix watched Kurt's tall figure in gray as he went to Nancy and then to Don. When the door closed after him, she was shaken to reality when Don came to her.

"This has gone on long enough, not meeting you," he said, taking her hand, holding it, smiling suavely at her. "Eddie has a positive genius for meeting the loveliest people. Of course we'll see you again, Alix. I shall, at least."

Nancy took her into her bedroom again.

"I'd like you to meet my mother," she said. "She doesn't go out often, doesn't meet many new people. I'm sure you'll like each other. She has a small house in the country. Will you go out with me on Saturday? We'll have lunch downtown first."

Alix met her eyes in the mirror. Saturday. So much lay between now and then. By Saturday she would have had dinner with Kurt and perhaps she would know why his mouth was bitter at times and why at other times it was such a tender mouth.

"I'd love to meet your mother, Nancy."

* * *

Walking beside Eddie to the car, she thought of what Tuck had said, "When it has you, it's too late to do anything about it." Now she thought, "I don't want to do anything about it!"

"They were crazy about you," Eddie said, placing the robe over her.

"Nancy is sweet and beautiful. Don flirts. How poised and confident he is, Eddie!" she could not mention Kurt who had said, "The night after tomorrow night." The promise in those words!

When he turned on the radio in the car and a woman sang, "What will I tell my heart?" Alix thought how absurd it was that suddenly she wanted to cry. "For happiness, for joy," she thought. "Because he was there and I know him and I'm going to see him again."

Stopping the quivering little roadster before the apartment house, Eddie turned to her and spoke falteringly.

"Alix, this isn't the time or the place to say what I'm going to say. But I'm going to say it anyway. No, I'm not going to ask you to marry me now. I'm in no position to marry. But I'd—I'd like to know how I stand with you and I—I want you to know you've done a lot for me. You've shown me that a fellow can have fun without getting drunk and spending a lot of money."

"Next to Tuck, you're the best friend I have, Eddie. That's how you stand with me. But I'm not in love with you." Two hours ago she could have said truthfully that she wasn't in love with anyone. But not now. "I didn't know I was being a good influence. Maybe it's my father in me. My father was a clergyman."

"You've never told me anything about your life or your people.

"Because it hurts to remember." Her childhood abruptly ended when she was in her teens, her dreams tarnished with grief and loneliness. "I was born and raised in a small town. My mother was a semi-invalid. When my father died of pneumonia, my mother just—just stopped living." She looked away from him into the snowy street. "My brother Tod got into trouble with the police. He was with a group of boys who broke into a store one night and stole tires. He always said he didn't know they meant to steal, that he just went along. When it was straightened out finally, he ran away. He's a sailor on a tramp ship and he's written to me from nearly every port in the world. I worry terribly about him and want him to come home. That's all there is, Eddie. Good night and thanks for asking me today."

Thank you for more than that, she thought. Thank you for new feelings that have colored my world as if with a magic brush. Thank you because it was through you I know that a little girl who dreamed did not dream too much when she knew that one day she would meet a man like Kurt Deering....

"I'll call you," he said. "Give my love to Tuck and tell her we'll all go to the movies soon."

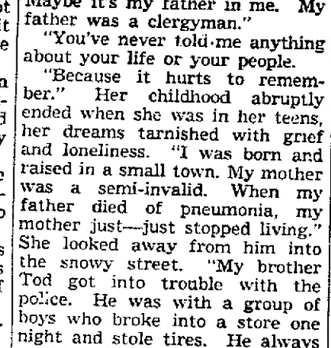
"ACHE ALMOST DROVE ME WILD," SAYS RETIRED MOTORMAN

Mansfield citizen now joyfully states there is no sign of the old agony in back, arms, legs or muscles. All praise given Vendol.



MR. P. M. HOOVER

The popularity of Vendol grows day by day, as is proven by the many local people who call at Central Drug Store to see the Vendol Man and learn more about this splendid Root, Herb and Alkaline medicine that is doing so much good all over this section. Seems as if most everyone will soon be taking it—and there's no wonder, since it so often brings relief like that reported by Mr. P. M. Hoover of 343 Springmill St., Mansfield, a retired Street Car Motorman known to thousands here in this city. He says:

"I'd been a victim of constipation for years and as time went on many other ailments resulted and combined to make my life really miserable. I was afraid to eat because of the suffering I knew would follow from indigestion, gas and heartburn; it seemed scarcely any use to go to bed, because my nerves were so frayed that restful sleep was just about impossible. And, worst of all, my body seemed to be one solid ache, with particular misery in my back, arms, and legs. The aches in my back made it hard to bend over and almost a torture to straighten up again. You can imagine how my work suffered while I felt like this.

"It was astonishing to see the way Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets helped me. Seems they were made especially for me.

"The first few doses got my bowels moving like a charm and now since taking this treatment about a month, I'm like a brand new person. I eat whatever I like without a sign of the old after-distress; my nerves are so quiet that I sleep like a log almost from the moment my head touches the pillow; but most wonderful of all my grand relief is, there's no longer any trace of the old agony in either my back, arms, legs or muscles. Vendol is due a lot of credit for all of this, so it gives me real pleasure to publicly recommend it to others."

You'll never know how much good this grand medicine made from nature's Roots and Herbs with Alkalines added, can do for you till you give it a chance. It is sold by all leading druggists and the Vendol Man is daily at Central Drug Store, Cor. Main and Fourth Sts., to explain all about it. Don't delay seeing him.

PROMISE CITIES 'STOP-GAP' LAW TO AID NEEDY

Senate, House Leaders Launch Program for Legislation to Obtain Relief Funds.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Ohio's large cities brought to the legislature today a plea for immediate financial assistance on poor relief and apparently won senate and house leaders to a plan for prompt "stop-gap" legislation.

Although administration leaders said during the morning that they would insist on enacting at least a two-year program, conferences were scheduled with mayors and finance officers for a temporary bill.

One house leader said the "stop-gap" would be passed only if municipalities would agree to deduction from allocations of state funds in the permanent program any grant received immediately.

Want Cities To Share.

House Speaker William M. McCulloch told the group that there was little hope of the state assuming full financial responsibility for relief, and other house members questioned the municipal delegation closely on possible sources of revenue for local matching of state funds.

Spokesmen for the municipalities agreed that their needs for 1939 might be doubled by the works progress administration's policy of laying off workers eligible for other forms of public assistance, such as old age pensions, aid for dependent children and mothers' pensions.

The seven largest cities estimated their total needs for 1939, assuming the present level of WPA employment and private business did not drop, at almost $16,000,000

Earl E. Hagerman, Dayton finance director and president of the Ohio League of Municipalities, said a "minimum estimate" for the entire state was $20,000,000 and "might easily be doubled if WPA drops thousands from its rolls and business conditions get worse."

The administration program, it was learned meanwhile, contemplated state grants of about $20,000,000 for the biennium of $10,000,000 a year, to be matched dollar for dollar with local funds.

Although strong opposition was expected from rural members, leaders indicated they would attempte to allocate state funds on a basis of need. Previous grants were made on proportionate tax duplicates, giving many counties large relief surpluses while urban centers ran into deficits.

Municipalities and townships will receive enabling legislation designed to assist them in raising their shares of the money. These will take the form chiefly of removing restrictions on certain special funds and permitting transfers from the local sub-divisions' general operating funds

SUBMIT FARM COST RECORDS

Dozen Turn Over Operation Figures to Extension Specialist.

Approximately a dozen Richland county farmers who kept accounts of their income and expenditures last year submitted their records to Guy Miller, extension specialist from Ohio State university, at the courthouse yesterday.

About half that number attended a session later when Miller outlined the procedure for keeping accounts. Several other county farmers, however, are expected to keep accounts this year, County Agent George B Ganyard said.

The records are taken to Ohio State university where figures showing results are compiled and returned to county agents.

Miller was in charge of a business school for farmers last night at the courthouse, outlining practical methods for keeping records of income and expenses on farms. About 40 farmers attended the school last night.

'CURFEW' PAIN TO POLICEMEN

9:30 Deadline Brings Out More Mischief-Bent Kiddies.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. —(AP)— Curfew worked in reverse when police revived it here last night.

Instead of taking children off the streets, it brought more on.

"You'd think they had plotted the whole thing," said a puzzled blue-coat. "Right on the dot of 9:30 the streets are suddenly filled with boys in short pants and little girls in pig tails."

"Might as well try to round up a flock of jack-rabbits," he grumbled. "They scoot around the corner and give you the razzberry. You chase 'em in the front door and they run out the back."

283 MORE OHIO WORKERS FIRED

of Zanesville as planning engineer in charge of highway work in the Muskingum conservancy district. Since the work in the district is about completed, Beightler said the position would not be filled.

Some to Be Rehired.

The director announced that it might be necessary to rehire some of the construction and maintenance workers who have been discharged when the summer highway program is expanded.

"I won't resign," declared Carr, who was suspended for 30 days by Beightler with the announcement that removal charges would be filed unless a resignation was forthcoming. "If they abolish my job, that's all right so long as they don't fill it again."

Beightler acted after determining, he said, that employment files had been destroyed in 10 of tthe 12 highway division offices on orders from Columbus two days before Gov. Bricker and his cabinet took office.

The new administration in its first week discharged 1,134 employes, 626 of them from the roads department, and Beightler announced that a total of 500 would go this week.

Dismissals in other divisions were expected to boost the firings to around 2,000, as department heads sought to carry out Bricker's orders to put the state government on a "business-like basis."

Administration leaders said provisional appointees of former Gov. Martin L. Davey's regime had been hit hardest by the "purge" and that hundreds of jobs had been abolished to effect economies

Other gubernatorial recommendations included:

Graft — A permanent statute providing removal and other penalties for state officers guilty of "collusion" in making purchases or contracts except to the lowest and best bidder, a proposal aimed at "legalized graft" for which the Davey administration was criticized by a senate committee last year.

Seeks 3-Member Bond.

Civil service—Replace the present two-member commission with a personnel administrator under a three-member board of review or with a three-member commission to halt abuse of the merit system.

Unemployment compensation - Replace the present Democratic-controlled commission with "men of unquestioned integrity and high motives x x x not hampered by a narrow partisan administration."

Education—Submit to the voters a constitutional amendment for a state board of education which would appoint the director of education.

Courts—Eliminate "short term" vacancy elections.

Poor relief—Adopt a long-term program, state and local governments to share the cost but with state control over administration reduced to a minimum.

Old age pensions — Create an advisory board and eliminate "dishonest and politically-motivated administration" of aged benefits, a division still under control of a Davey appointee.

Welfare — Integrate public assistance programs, including federal aids, and reorganize department.

Conservation — Name a new council with power to appoint the conservation commissioner, now selected by the director of agriculture; division criticized as having been "hampered by narrow partisan politics."

Industry—Create a bureau to attract new capital and enterprise to the state, to publicize Ohio's historical and scenic attractions for tourists, and to promote new uses for agricultural products.

Meanwhile, confronted with Gov. Bricker's demand for "stringent economies," the Ohio legislature was launched today on a far-reaching program to revise drastically the state's financial policies and to drive asserted corruption and waste out of the government.

Addressing the general assembly in his biennial message, Governor Bricker sounded this keynote of his administration:

"With efficient and economical administration of revenue producing instrumentalities of the government, coupled with stringent economies in the administration of the many departments, divisions, boards and bureaus of state, I am convinced that the present financial dilemma can be met, and Ohio once more placed upon a sound financial basis without any increase, but probably an ultimate decrease in taxation."

Flays Davey Rule.

The state's new chief executive, first Republican in that office for eight years, struck out vigorously with condemnation of the outgoing administration of Martin L. Davey, declaring:

"We have not been in office long, but long enough to know that there has been a reckless spending of public money. There has been a flagrant abuse of power. . . . Honesty and economy are yet prerequisites to good government."

Governor Bricker said the state faced deficits of $12,000,000 in the school foundation program and $2,000,000 in the state's general revenue while financial crisis threatened local communities whose poor relief resources were virtually exhausted.

To meet the financial problem, Bricker's message recommended an overhauling of appropriation and tax policies, chiefly abolishing the practive of earmarking revenues for certain taxes for special purposes such as relief, schools and old age pensions.

Wants Specific Funds.

Instead, he asked the legislature to appropriate specific sums for these functions from the general revenue fund into which would be paid revenues from the currently earmarked taxes

This method, continued the governor, would insure these activities receiving sufficient funds without incurring deficits and at the same time maintaining efficient control over the state's expenditures.

The school foundation deficit, Bricker added, should be retired over a period of years by the state, which would immediately relieve local school districts of interest charges on the debts resulting from the fund deficiency.

CITY FIRE LOSS $33,700 IN '38

reported for the 23 calls made into Madison township, outside the city limits

The major fire in the city in 1938 was at the Hughes Supply company last March when flames destroyed a part of the building at an estimated loss of $8,000. A fire in the same month at the Brooks apparel store caused $8,000 damage. During March the fire loss was estimated at $18,000, or more than half of the total recorded for the entire year

Reviewing the cause of fires reported in the city in 1938, the report disclosed the most common cause to be defective wiring, which was responsible for 28 fires, while sparks from chimneys and defective chimneys caused 24, overheated furnaces and stoves 12, four were laid to persons whose clothing caught fire from standing too close to an open gas stove, and children playing with matches accounted for another five.

Among recommendations made by Seeburger were the adoption of a building code as a means of reducing fire insurance rates. He also recommended the replacement of three pumpers now in service but in need of repairs, along with the construction of a new station house in the western part of the city.

Also recommended was the addition of four more men to the department, a request that has been made annually for the past 10 years; the purchase of 1,500 feet of new hose, and the installation of 12 fire alarm boxes throughout the Woodland area

HOW ABOUT HIS SCHOOL REPORTS?

By John C. Davis, Druggist

The report card is your regular check on the progress your child makes at school. Is it satisfactory? Is there some point at which he falls below?

Adenoids are a frequent cause of poor grades, of unsatisfactory marks. Many children are handicapped by this difficulty, easily, reasonably, corrected.

Arrange for a physical examination. The most routine check-up of your child's health will reveal this minor yet serious condition.

Medication may be required, therefore refer all prescriptions to a qualified druggist. Your doctor will tell you that a skilled diagnosis must be supported by pure drugs

SET UP $1,460 FOR CITY FLOOD CONTROL WORK

City, County and Conservancy District to Finance Dredging Here.

City and county officials and the Mansfield conservancy board today had tentatively set up a $1,460 fund to launch a WPA-sponsored flood control project in the city.

The project will bring the Mansfield conservancy district into actual operation for the first time since the $160,000 district was set up 12 years ago. The conservancy board agreed yesterday at a meeting with city and county officials to contribute $260 to the new project, all the active funds the board has in its treasury.

County Engineer Howard C. Sword said approximately 150 men will be put to work at dredging Ritter's Run opposite the Armory within 10 days. The project calls for dredging of Ritter's Run and Touby's Run in the city of Mansfield and construction of retaining walls along the streams.

City to Contribute $600.

At yesterday's meeting at the courthouse, Mayor C. M Hunter and Service-Safety Director Earl Nist said city council would be asked to approve $600 for the city's share of the work, while the county commissioners pledged an equal amount.

The flood control project, which is a part of a $131,000 county-wide WPA ditch program, will cost about $55,000, Sword said, but federal funds will finance most of the project.

In lieu of cash, the county will use its dredging equipment and trucks as a part of its share of the WPA project, Sword said.

First workers to be used on the project will be transferred here from a ditch job in Jackson township, the engineer said. The Mansfield part of the program was set up to provide work for 700 men for three months, but Sword said fewer men probably would be employed over a longer period

Members of the conservancy board which is handling the reuring of bonds for the Mansfield conservancy district are T. R. Barnes, Ernest Hartman and C. L. Hartenfels.

District Jurists Hear Three Richland County Cases.

Convening at the courthouse today, the Fifth district court of appeals was scheduled to hear three cases brought up from Richland county common pleas court.

The court granted continuance to Feb. 15 of two cases involving the liability of the Mercer Casualty company, Celina, O., in five damage suits growing out of a fatal automobile accident in Jefferson county about two years ago.

Attorneys for Russell Plunket and other defendants in the suit, had asked for the extension.

The three cases scheduled for hearing before the court included the action of Lottie Culler vs. Wade Culler to null the deed to a property in Mansfield and collect a $1,152 judgment; an appeal from a court decision holding a Mansfield property could not be liquidated in bankruptcy proceedings against John Schwaner, and a case involving an attempt of Charles Old, trustee in bankruptcy for the former Halbark men's store, to collect $17,000 damages from Dr. Talbot who took over assets of the store.

Appeals court judges are Charles W. Montgomery, Clyde Sherrick and Charles C. Lemert.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1939.

History does not repeat itself—it's the people who do the repeating.

Conditions are improving—the advantage of having two cars is again being stressed.

According to one astronomer, life would not be very pleasant on other planets—which seems to make it unanimous.

Security By Individual Effort.

A NEW high in soundness was struck by President Roosevelt in his Social Security message yesterday, when he said:

"We shall make the most lasting progress if we recognize that social security can furnish only a base on which each one of our citizens may build his individual security through his own individual efforts."

Therein is stated a fact with which there can be no dispute. It is too obvious to need explanation, that in all cases of disbursing pensions or aid of any sort to non-producers, either the worker himself, during his earning period, or other workers, must pay for the support of those who have no resources and whose earning power has passed.

It has been frequently demonstrated that many people, regardless of the extent of temporary earnings, are not so constituted as to put aside enough to provide for themselves in later years. Many causes, including a variety of human weaknesses, contribute to this absence of foresight.

In urging the advisability of expanding the scope of the present social security, the President also warned against "turning to untried and demonstrably unsound panaceas."

Whether the present basis of social security, with billions of dollars flowing into the federal treasury for use in paying the running expenses of government, can be classed as "sound" is being seriously questioned, but that there is a real need for a more assured way in which "each one of our citizens may build his individual security through his own individual efforts" is quite evident.

Any Similarity Is Coincidental.

NOT LONG AGO a News-Journal reader called up by telephone to inquire how Elsie Robinson could have found out so many things about this Mansfield resident as were recited in the "Listen World" article that day.

The answer is that Elsie Robinson lives in California, writes her articles there, and sends the copy to New York for syndication to a large number of newspapers.

This information is given for the reason that her today's article might also be regarded as making specific reference to some young folks in Mansfield, whereas it is quite likely that similar situations exist in any other city—as well as here.

In any event, the article is well worth reading—and those whom the shoe fits should have no hesitancy in putting it on.

To Study Use of Leisure.

SOMETHING of real value may be accomplished by the decision of the young people of Mansfield's Youth Forum to devote study to the subject of beneficial use of leisure.

Proper apportioning of work and leisure plays an important part in contributing to happiness and success in life—and the earlier boys and girls can find this out the better off they will be.

Need of more places where young people can meet in wholesome surroundings is recognized by the youth group, and whatever encouragement and co-operation can be given by older persons in working out plans along this line will be well worthwhile.

Even complete acceptance of the theory of "personal liberty" which grants each individual the right to "go to hell in his own way" scarcely removes community responsibility to provide an environment which encourages good behavior, stimulates ambition and develops character in young people.

Fines Assessed In Lieu of Licenses.

UP IN TOLEDO fines totaling $40,000 were paid into the city treasury last year by gamblers operating the numbers racket.

It appears that arrest of persons associated with operation of this gambling racket has become a part of police routine in Toledo and that intake from fines serves in lieu of a license.

While the practice of regularly collecting fines from known violators of law may not meet general approval, it seems to have advantages over the policy of some other cities where graft from known law violators flows into the hands of officials for the protection essential to these outside-the-law operations.

In Mansfield, for instance, where there is a wide variety of commercialized gambling, without suspicion of official graft, but with at least an occasional resultant suicide, it might appear that an easy source of thousands of dollars of municipal revenues is being overlooked.

With the urgent need for additional patrolmen—for traffic duty—there might be advantage in adoption of the Toledo plan of regularly assessing heavy fines against known habitual law violators. This was the method employed a number of years ago in dealing with houses of prostitution, but for some reason the practice was dropped.

If sufficient objection should arise against such a plan, however, the natural alternative would be law enforcement.

Lowest Bid Not Always Best Bid.

WHEN police scout cars in Detroit failed to catch bandits fleeing in faster automobiles there was a check-up.

It was disclosed that one police car had required 192 spark plugs in a nine-month period. It appears the spark plugs had been bought from the lowest bidder, in disregard of quality.

Quality being equal, it is reasonable to assume that in competitive bidding the lowest bid will be accepted, but the latitude of "lowest and best" is ordinarily given to officials and others authorized to award contracts or make purchases.

As is quite generally recognized, the lowest bid is not always the best, and in many instances the better article is well worth the difference in cost.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — It is time somebody gave a semi-blow by blow account of what goes on at some of the more active press conferences in this perpetual world's fair. Harry Hopkins' conferences are as good as any, especially since he has become secretary of commerce and so endowed with new governmental dignity.

Forty or more reporters are seated in two rows around a long mahogany table as Hopkins strolls in. He sits down, then nervously bounces up again and a battery of photographers blast away at him.

"Well, Mr. Secretary, what about business?" Hopkins grins that starter away. He knows it is a bit of spoofing, as he hasn't been on the job but a few days.

"What have you to say about 'spend and spend, and tax and tax and elect and elect?'" It is a pert girl reporter questioning him about the statement attributed to him but repeatedly denied by him.

"Arthur Krock is the authority on that." (Mr. Krock of the New York Times is one of the several who attributed to Hopkins the statement that spending, taxing and electing was the business of New Dealers).

"That's the thing the Senate committee will ask you when you come up for confirmation," twitted the girl reporter. Hopkins brushed it aside a bit sourly.

* * *

He'll Wait and See.

"WHAT do you think of the general level of commodity prices?" It is another teaser, and he grins.

"Now listen—" he begins, then explains that he isn't going into a long comment on business or the department of commerce until he finds what it is about.

"Have you any definite ideas about the department, or are you just seeking your way around?"

"Of course I have some definite ideas as to criteria that determine whether somebody is a good secretary of commerce. As to anything new, I am asking advice and assistance of everybody I can." He then mentions that he is calling in leading business men for informal conferences—and that is the lead of the newspaper stories about the conference.

"What are you doing about subordinates using government boats for pleasure?"

"I told 'em not to ride on them."

"Are you planning to reconvene the National Screw Thread commission?" Everybody howls, including Hopkins. It turns out to be a serious question about standardization of threads on pipes, and bolts. No answer comes. Hopkins hadn't yet heard it.

* * *

Believes In Profit System.

"DO YOU believe in the profit system?"

"Now Fred, you're still on a holiday."

Fred: "That's serious."

Hopkins, also serious: "Yes."

He is teased about his promotion from a cramped office in the WPA building to a walnut lined throne room in the 20-acre, five-floor giant of a building housing the commerce department.

"I liked my old office much better."

He hasn't been around his huge new domain yet, but grins as he recalls:

"The baby got in (his five-year-old daughter). Somewhere in this building is a fish pond and she came home with the bright idea of fishing out the fishes and making a swimming pool."

Everybody there knows about the winsome tot, whose mother is dead. She spends much time living in the White House.

There are a few random questions about the civil service and appointments.

"I am not contemplating a lot of personnel changes," he says, and in that brief statement is much comfort, if only temporary, to flocks of departmental employes.

The thing ends, and the government hasn't fallen, nor been built up much.

THE TWO-PANTS SUIT!

Looking Into the Relief Squabble

—By MORGAN M. BEATTY

WASHINGTON—The question of the moment in Washington:

"Is congress at long last about to face the relief problem in earnest?"

That problem has been pointed out—but not answered—by economists of every hue, from stark radical to ultra conservative. Everybody has been talking about the politics in relief, but few people have been discussing the real problem.

Simplified, it is just this—the arithmetic of relief.

The arithmetic is a simple, seventh grade equation almost anybody can understand. But the answer is as elusive as the Einstein theory.

Here's one side of the equation: By most reliable counts, there are about 10,000,000 unemployed persons in the United States—people who can't, or don't, find a job.

The federal, state, county and city governments are taking care of about half of these people, part of them with a dole, and part through work relief (WPA). The rest are not getting relief from government.

* * *

On the Other Side.

HERE'S the other side of the equation:

The federal government is spending money at the rate of more than two billion dollars a year to care for some 3,000,000 of the unemployed. Every dollar of that sum represents borrowed money—red ink on the treasury's books.

The states, counties, and cities are spending at the rate of a half billion dollars a year to give two million-odd more a dole. And many of these governments are also going in the red to do the job.

Thus, the problem is, how can the unemployed be taken care of without bankrupting the various units of government in the United States?

Naturally, the long-term answer would appear to be that private industry should be encouraged to re-employ the 10,000,000 unemployed. Everybody seems to agree on that, even the most rabid of New Dealers. But everybody also agrees that this can't be done right away; some even think it will never be done.

Anyway, the immediate, pressing problem of relief remains—unanswered. Congress, of course, is torn between the pressure to cut the cost of government and the pressure to take a generous, humanitarian attitude on relief.

The Roosevelt administration has taken its stand—that the problem is here and its solution not yet in sight. Therefore, the president proposes to continue to spend about as much this fiscal year, and next, on relief, as during the last three years. That means more than $2,000,000,000 annually.

Hence, the president proposes to spend another $875,000,000 between February 1 and June 30—the end of this fiscal year. (Add that to the $1,425,000,000 appropriated previously for the first seven months of the fiscal year, and you have your annual total exceeding two billions.)

* * *

Just a Compromise.

THE house sub-committee in charge of the relief purse strings has cut the $875,000,000 to $725,000,000, a slash of $150,000,000. Most authorities on all sides of the political fence agree that this is plain compromise between a policy of spending, and a policy of retrenchment—not a solution.

On the basis of that compromise, most authorities figure that congress is going to make no more than a gesture to cut the expense of relief, or even of the federal government as a whole.

If that is true, the answer to the question of the hour is:

"Congress is not going to face the relief problem in dead earnest this year."

But it is a significant fact that congressmen who have never before had more than a speaking acquaintance with the intricate realms of economics are burning the midnight oil these days—studying the arithmetic of relief.

For an understanding of economics is one way to begin to understand the complexities of present day social problems and their relation to the national budget of dollars and cents.

Timely Editorial

Right-Way Corrigan.

Douglas Corrigan, who was a 36a-week mechanic before he became the "wrong-way" flyer of the Atlantic, is reported to have earned $75,000 in the last three months. He has been starring in a motion picture, collecting royalties from his autobiography in magazine and book form, and making a personal appearance tour of the country.

He is not only making money but salting it away. He lived in a low-priced hotel room while in Hollywood, went to the studio in a bus, lunched on nickel ice-cream bars. He manages all his financial affairs, does his own mechanical repairing. No offer attracts him, it is said, unless there is cash on the line.

That's all right. Prodigal-handed Hollywood may not like it, but it smacks of good sense. A year from now, two years, his feat will be forgotten, his name will be no magnet. He does well to make hay now. It's the right way, Corrigan.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Health Advice

Most Users Don't Need Cathartics.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

OF THE medicines which are taken by the people of the United States, at least 60 per cent of the daily consumption are cathartics. And it may safely be said that not more than two per cent are necessary. It may further be said that constipation, the condition they are supposed to relieve, is made worse or actually created by the use of cathartics.

Most constipation is imaginary. Its evils are almost entirely imaginary. The imaginary constipate thinks he needs a cathartic, which irritates the inside of his bowel, which makes him think his bowel is distended, which makes him take more cathartics. The vicious circle is complete.

Regarded As Crank.

These doctrines, which I have been preaching for many years, are not readily acceptable to the cathartic habitues. I am regarded by them as a crank. I am, therefore, glad to have support in an authoritative book by Dr. Harold Aaron, medical consultant to Consumer's Union U. S., called "Our Common Ailment — Constipation, Its Cause and Cure."

Dr. Aaron points out that just as no two people are alike temperamentally, so no two sets of intestines are alike. The rhythm varies with all of us. Our insides work on different schedules. For some, one evacuation a day, for some, two, for some, one every other day is normal.

To substantiate this, look at the experiment performed by Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic. He gave healthy medical students sets of gelatin capsules containing small glass beads. They swallowed these with their meals. The beads were counted as they came out. The results showed that normal young men with good digestions and daily bowel movements did not pass in 24 hours anything like 100 per cent of the beads. Two passed 85 per cent in 24 hours; most of the students took four days to get rid of 75 per cent, and some passed only 50 per cent in nine days.

"It is not intended that the bowel should be free of waste matter," writes Dr. Aaron—another bugaboo with no basis.

No Basis For It.

When a physician asks his patients who complain of constipation what they mean by the term, he is usually told it means that if they stopped taking laxatives the bowels would not move during the next 24 hours. This idea has been encouraged by high-powered propaganda, but it has no basis in fact. It is really amusing to see the astonishment exhibited by one of these cathartic-slaves when he finds he has a normal evacuation after having been persuaded to leave off the dosage entirely for a day.

For treatment, the first step is an x-ray examination to see whether constipation actually exists or not. If it is mild, an increase in the amount of bulk foods in the diet may overcome the constipation. The amount of fruits and vegetables in the daily diet (but not bran foods) may be increased. In most people six to 12 stewed prunes a day are all that is necessary.

A Farmer's Diary

A Close Call.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I FOLLOWED a narrow valley with high, steep, wooded hills on both sides. A clear, fast-moving stream had gouged out the shaly banks and uprooted trees that spanned the creek like bridges. Farther down, the highway curved abruptly and an old-time, rustic covered bridge bore me across the water. The farther end looked small, and the rumbling planks echoed beneath my wheels, in the dark interior. Below this bridge, I saw, in a level space where a portion of the stream had been shunted off, a millpond; and to the east stood an old mill, with a tall, slow-moving, overshot water wheel. I heard the whir of wheels, and the whirling movement of the grinding burrs.

At the front, where farmers drove to unload their grain, a heavily timbered portion of the roof extended. From this dangled a shiny steel hook at the end of a long rope, which moved up and down a pulley. This was the old-fashioned grain elevator.

I have a keen remembrance of such a mill, when I was a little lad. My father took me with him on the loaded old farm wagon. We sat on a board placed across the front end. When we arrived, the miller lowered the rope, my father looped it around the middle of a sack, and I saw it move upward to the high third story window, where it was pulled in. To my childish eyes, that third story window was a vast distance up, and the miller looked small and far away, in the opening. I sat, wide-eyed, and watched sack after sack go up and disappear, until only two remained.

Then, just as one sack nearly had reached the top, the rope parted. I saw the miller, frantic and white faced, lean out and heard his alarm yell, "Look out, below!" My father jumped, or rolled, or slid off at the rear. Fortunately for me the back of the wagon was in the danger spot, and I had stayed on the driver's seat.

I sat, open-mouthed, too startled to move, and watched the sack of grain break through the heavy boards of the wagon bed and burst upon the ground.

Advice to Newlyweds: Go In Debt!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

"WHAT would you do," says she, "if you were a couple of newlyweds, starting life on small salaries with few possessions and had a gang of lively friends who ate you out of house and home each week-end? Can young people possibly get ahead under such circumstances. Our families are always lecturing us about saving but the little we could save isn't worth the awful reputation we'd get for being tightwads."

What would I do on such a spot?

I'D GO IN DEBT!

I'd march down to the stores, select some substantial commodity for my home and buy it on the installment plan. And when that was paid for, I'd repeat the process with an equally expensive purchase.

No, I'm not crazy. Nor would such a scheme be "ruinous extravagance." To the contrary, it would be constructive common sense.

Consider what's happening now. You're leaving yourselves and your possessions open to the raid of ruthless marauders. Naturally, your friends do not consider themselves robbers and neither do you. They honestly believe—and you agree—that they're a bunch of fine fellows. Yet they are looting your life as completely as any gang of thieves. More so in fact . . . for not only do they use your time and cash but they waste your energy, drain your emotions. Having no aim in life themselves, they deliberately prevent you from acquiring one by ridiculing all People-Who-Take-Life-Seriously . . . making them seem either Screamingly Funny or Disgustingly Stingy. Obviously, you do not wish to belong in either catagory, so you join in their cheers, phone for another case of beer . . . and beam when you're applauded as a "Regular Guy!"

But you're not. You're just a sucker, kid . . . a sucker who's being taken for a ride which will make a BUM of you as well as a BANKRUPT.

What can you do about it? Just one thing . . . YOU CAN PUT YOURSELF BEYOND THE CLUTCH OF THEIR GREEDY DESIRE BY GIVING SOME MERCHANT A FIRST MORTGAGE ON YOUR PAY CHECK AND YOUR HONOR.

Which will automatically accomplish three mighty fine things. First it will SAVE your money . . . second, it will PROTECT your standing . . . third, IT WILL CHALLENGE YOUR HONOR. Under your present program, you're not only drifting but you're deteriorating. Each day sees you with a little less spunk and self-respect as well as a little less cash. You don't realize it. You may worry a bit, now and then, but, generally speaking, you're having a swell time.

BUT YOU WOULDN'T HAVE A SWELL TIME WITH A BILL COLLECTOR CAMPING ON YOUR FRONT DOOR! AS A CHARACTER STIMULATOR, THERE'S NOTHING ON EARTH AS EFFICACIOUS AS A NICE, FAT, OVERDUE DEBT!

What would your friends say? That would depend on the friends. Some would go extremely sour, thus exposing their own undesirability. A few—a very few—will understand and admire you for what you've done. Such are the salt of the world!

As for your own feelings—they may not be so hot. For although you blame your ne'er-do-well companions, chances are, you like playing around as much as they do. But it may comfort you to remember this—every great person made his mark in exactly the same way—BY BITING OFF MORE THAN HE COULD CHEW AND THEN HUSTLING LIKE THE DICKENS TO CATCH UP WITH HIS BITE!

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Though London is one of them, this tale of two cities has nothing to do with Dickens' bloody masterpiece. It concerns Charles Laughton, and the element of time, and a broken water-pipe in a Manhattan apartment.

Now London, lying some 3,000 miles to the east, is about six hours ahead of New York. At 8 o'clock on a recent morning Mr. Laughton stepped before a camera in a London studio and enacted a scene from "Jamaica Inn." There is no script from which to quote, but one of the lines Mr. Laughton spoke had to do with the whereabouts of someone emotionally very dear to him. It may have been a daughter. It may have been even an old, half-forgotten love. I am not familiar with the story. Nevertheless it doesn't require much imagination to visualize fat Mr. Laughton, leaning against a lamppost, wondering half aloud, "Where are you, honey; where are you?"

At about the time Mr. Laughton was delivering this query into the microphones his attractive red-haired wife, Elsa Lanchester, was visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, in East 49th street, Manhattan.

* * *

SHE had arrived on the Normandie the previous afternoon. There had been dinner, and a theater, and by 2 a. m. (8 a. m. London time) they were preparing to retire, because there was to be a cocktail party for Mrs. Laughton next afternoon, and the girls needed some rest.

But suddenly they heard a strange noise. A water pipe had burst. It flooded from the bathroom and spread over the upstairs apartment. It gushed in little eddies along the hall, leaked through the floor, and poured down on the library and living room below. It drenched hundreds of books, and ran onto paintings, and streaked the walls and drenched the living room rugs.

* * *

AT 2 a. m. the servants had been dismissed. Mr. Abbott had hurried away to the Museum of Modern Art. The two women were quite alone. At first they were horrified, but finally they pulled their wits together. Mrs. Abbott, a former film critic for the London Daily Mail, got into some old dungarees. Elsa Lanchester slipped into a pair of soiled pajamas ("My mussed Normandie linen"); she rolled her pajamas up to her knees. They got buckets and mops and rags and went to work.

"We must have presented a strange sight"—Mrs. Laughton speaking—"Somehow we got that water turned off. We removed hundreds of books from the shelves and wiped them dry. We sponged four large pails of water from the rugs. By 8 o'clock we had some semblance of order, but we were exhausted.

"Then the plumbers came and fixed things, and the servants had everything ready, and the party was a huge success. Then after the party we attended the premiere of Charles' new picture, 'The Beachcomber,' in which I play the most unattractive female you ever saw—well, almost the most unattractive—and since then we've seen a lot of shows, and met a lot of nice people, and now I'm going home. On the Paris."

Dear Charles, if you change the tense of that question when you meet Elsa and ask, "Where were you, honey?" the answer ought to be, "In water, honey, with my pajamas knee high." If she tells you anything else she's kidding you.

Capture of Levine Boy's Kidnap-Killer Near, Claim

G-MEN TRACK DOWN SLAYER, FLASH ALARM

N. Y. Paper Says FBI Launches Fresh Hunt After Quarry Evades Police Trap.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK — G-men have tracked down the kidnaper who murdered 12-year-old Peter Levine of New Rochelle and his capture is imminent, the New York Journal and American reported today in an exclusive story.

A detailed description of the killer whose capture will solve the 11-months-old mystery was flashed to all FBI offices in the east, the Journal and American said. Twice the fugitive barely escaped traps set for him in upstate New York and Boston, the story continued.

Described As Young Man.

The alarm sent out by the G-men described the kidnap-murderer as a young man in his late twenties who kidnaped Peter solely for profit, according to the Journal and American. A resident in the vicinity of New Rochelle, he suddenly vanished when the search became hot, the story added. The man sought has no previous criminal record and is a sort of "Jack of all trades," the newspaper said, reporting he had lived and worked in many eastern cities, including New York.

An unusual burst of activity among G-men stationed at New Rochelle since the kidnaping last Feb. 24 revealed the new break, according to the Journal and American. The identity of the kidnaper has been known to a handful of highly placed G-men for the past two months, the newspaper said it discovered after a check with federal men. Local law enforcement agencies were kept in the dark to preclude too wide a dissemination of the progress made by the G-men.

The newspaper said it was not immediately learned how the identity was made and by which of the three important clues—the ransom note symbols, the toy typewriter on which it was printed or the copper wire with which the boy's headless body was bound.

In a trap set up-state, the G-men missed their quarry by less than an hour, the Journal and American reported. In Boston they crashed into his hideout only to discover he had departed an hour before.

The secret alarm broadcast to all eastern FBI offices includes a list of former haunts of the kidnap murderer to which he might return, according to the Journal and American.

The Levine boy disappeared Feb. 24 after leaving high school in New Rochelle for his home. His distraught father conducted an unrelenting search for him, mulcted by chiselers at every turn, until 94 days later, on May 29, the missing boy's mutilated body was washed ashore at Davenport Neck, near New Rochelle.

SENT TO PEN AS PAROLE VIOLATOR

Lorain Man Gets 1 to 3 Years In Non-Support Case.

Found guilty in common pleas court this morning of violating his probation, Ralph Williams, 31, colored, of Lorain, was sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary for one to three years by Judge C. H. Huston.

Williams, who was placed on probation for five years in 1936, repeatedly disregarded orders to support his wife and 10-year-old son in Mansfield, and misrepresented his earnings to Harry Crouse, county probation officer, court attaches said.

Judge Huston said he would recommend that Williams be required to serve more than the minimum of one year in the penitentiary because he perjured himself in court.

CHASES JAP SHIP

LONDON —(AP)— A Hongkong dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company, British news agency, said today that the British destroyer Thanet had chased a Japanese destroyer and forced her to surrender a seized Chinese fishing junk.

The junk was registered at Hongkong, British crown colony, hence technically was a British vessel. This was said to be the first time a British warship had intervened in a case of Japanese seizure of such vessels.

FINDS FAMILY AFTER 42 YEARS

Leesville Woman, Kidnaped as Child by Indians, Was Raised by Apaches.

Days passed and there was no trace of her. About a year after the kidnaping the skeleton of a child was found at the foot of a cliff, and the faded remains of a little plaid dress convinced her family that it was their lost child.

All but the father and the youngest brother, Dewey. They always believed that she was alive somewhere and sought her up and down the Indian Territory. Dewey even went to mediums to ask about his sister. Ten years ago one of them told him that he would find Eva, now a woman, somewhere in Alaska. So sure was he that his sister was there, that he left immediately for the Yukon, and there remained until a few weeks ago — always looking for her.

* * *

When Eva was about 14—she can only guess at dates and the passing of time—she knew that she was to be traded off to a strapping Indian buck in exchange for a pony. Something within her rebelled, and slipping out of her wigwam at night, she took her pony and rode rapidly away from the village. She hid by day and traveled by night and finally came to a town called Tishmingo. Handicapped by not knowing her own age, nor the name of her family nor where they lived, she made little progress in her search. Many children had been lost in that frontier country over a period of years.

So she got a job and supported herself. She was probably about 20 or a little older when she met a young man named Lockhart from southern Missouri. When they were married 25 years ago, he told her his people had originally come from Bellville, Ohio and he wanted to go back there. And so they came to Richland county where they remained for five years before moving to Leesville.

* * *

During the past few years the Lockharts have gone to Hot Springs, Ark., for the mineral baths in the winter. Last winter while they were at the famous resort, Eva Lockhart, who had long since given up all hope of finding her family, accidentally overheard a name.

Just a name—but it brought back things long forgotten. It was the name of her grandmother. She made inquiries, found the town in which the family lived and went to see them. The grandmother was dead and relatives refused to believe her story. She obtained the name of a sister living at Lawton, Okla., and wrote her. . . .

The sister wrote back: "You're not my lost sister. . . . We found her body a year after she disappeared. . . ." Mrs. Lockhart got on the train and went to Lawton. . . . The one thing she could remember was the name of the baby —Dewey—and that he had the measles. She convinced the sister and in a few days the entire family was notified, and before returning to Leesville she saw them all.

They wrote to Dewey and he came to Mansfield several weeks ago.

'I am still a little confused," she told The News-Journal. "I look at Dewey and I ask myself, 'Is he really my brother?' And my other sisters and brothers—they still seem like strangers. I find myself saying to Dewey, 'Shall we go down to see your folks in the summer?' before I remember that they are mine too."

One of the strangest phases of the story is that when she found her family, she learned for the first time that she was a quarter-blood Cherokee Indian; the grandmother she remembered was a full-blood Indian and had married a frontiersman who followed the westward trail into the Indian Territory.

Mr. Lockhart is at Hot Springs again this winter for his health, and perhaps before he returns to Ohio, Eva Lockhart and her brother will go to Oklahoma and Arkansas to visit "his" folks.

SCHOOL MERGER PLAN UP AGAIN

Boards in 3 Rural Districts Asked to Submit Proposal at Meeting Saturday.

School boards from three rural districts in northern Richland county will be asked to submit a plan for consolidation of their districts into a single unit at a meeting of the county board of education Saturday morning at the courthouse.

Boards from the Union rural, Butler township and Bloominggrove township districts were asked to confer with the county board following the second defeat in November of a proposed $75,900 bond issue for the construction of a consolidated school in the Union district which includes Weller and Franklin townships.

The bond issue would have provided the Union district's share of a $138,000 PWA building program.

With consolidation of schools in the four townships inevitable if they are to continue receiving state foundation funds, school officials said, the county board proposes to bring them together to reduce the cost of a new building for the entire district.

The former proposal included only Weller and Franklin townships which were consolidated two years ago, leaving Bloominggrove and Butler townships with their own schools.

Declining to comment on the proposed consolidation, Boyd Robinson, county superintendent, said he preferred to "let the districts work out the solution for themselves."

The county board of education will elect officers at Saturday's meeting. L. L. Rinehart, Sandusky township, headed the board last year.

PATRONS TO EAT ICE CREAM AS OHIO THEATER MARKS BIRTHDAY

Warner Brothers Ohio theater will celebrate its 11th birthday anniversary Thursday by presenting a stage show, with ice cream favors for its patrons.

The theater was opened on Jan. 19, 1928, near the end of the "silent era" of pictures. It was the first modern theater in Mansfield, although a number of others were in operation, including the old Opera House which had been made into a movie house sometime before that.

Three of the original employes are still on the theater's staff: Mrs. Rae Davidson, cashier; Tom Fike, stage manager; and Harvey Kibler, projectionist.

The theater was opened under the management of Harry Brown, jr. Frank Harpster, who was recently made district manager for Warners, set an unusual record by remaining in charge of the theater for almost seven years. He was succeeded a few weeks ago by William Dworski, present manager.

For a full week, starting Thursday, ice cream favors will be given out in the lobby in observance of the anniversary. A huge birthday cake with 11 candles, will be on display in the lobby from Thursday until Sunday when it will be cut and served to patrons.

Thursday and Friday the theater will present "Broadway After Dark," the revue which was brought to Columbus last week for inaugural week and which is said to be one of the best on the road this year.

It includes five all-star acts, besides a swing band and a chorus of 10 girls. "Mr. Moto's Last Warning" will be shown on the screen.

QUESTIONS TWO

Chief Calls in Bellville Men in Alleged Kidnaping Case.

In an effort to solve the alleged kidnaping last Friday evening of Mrs. Eleanore Wright, Police Chief Meade K. Bates this afternoon was to question two Bellville men concerning their whereabouts that night.

Bates said the two men "who knew too much about the abduction" had been ordered to appear at police headquarters this afternoon.

He added that neither of the men was the owner of the "large black sedan" in which Mrs. Wright said she had been forced into while she waited for a bus at South Main and Second streets at 7:15 p. m. Friday.

Mrs. Wright, who reported the kidnaping to police, said the car pulled to the curb while she had her back turned. A man put his hand over her mouth and forced her into the car with a driver-companion, she said, and then drove her to near Bellville where she finally escaped, going to a farmhouse where she obtained a ride back to Mansfield.

POINTS TO NEED FOR EXPANDING HOSPITAL HERE

Trustee Says Facilities Now Inadequate to Handle Big Emergency Case.

A warning that Mansfield's General hospital is inadequate to the needs of the city, and would be totally unable to handle a large number of emergency cases in addition to its average number of patients was sounded last night by L. A. Ott, member of the hospital board of trustees.

Ott spoke at a meeting of Chamber of Commerce committee chairmen in the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

"If an accident had occurred anytime between last Friday and Monday, involving a large number of persons, the hospital could not have given them beds," Ott said, urging his listeners to give consideration to enlarging the hospital as they studied the needs of the city.

He was corroborated in his statement by Dr. W. E. Wygant, who said that ward facilities were entirely inadequate.

The meeting, an informal one, was conducted by C. L. Van Derau, president of the C. of C., and was for the purpose of outlining committee work for the year and showing the correlation of duties of various committees.

Air Views on Problems.

Committee chairmen were asked to speak briefly, giving their views of the problems they are working on.

Ott, in addition to urging consideration for the need of more hospital facilities, spoke on traffic and safety. He is chairman of the traffic committee.

Others who spoke, and the committees they head, were: F. A. Chamberlain, industrial; C. K. Smaltz, transportation; L. J. Washburn, trade expansion; L. J. Ott, Know Mansfield; R. G. Fensch, advertising and publicity; Milo W. Hieber, membership; John S. Jones, membership meetings; Dr. W. H. Wolford, education; Herbert R. Slough, fire prevention; Dr. W. E. Wygant, health; Paul M. Eliot, municipal and county affairs; O. C. Henkel, parks and city beautification and M. W. Manz, water development. Others who spoke briefly were O. C. McCormick, former membership committee chairman, H. W. Arlin, J. W. Graham and R. D. Lindsay, of The News-Journal, and J. M. Hill.

Van Derau, former water development chairman, outlined some of the findings of the water development committee, and Paul W. Williams, secretary of the C. of C., explained how committees could correlate their activities and efforts.

CUTS INSURANCE ON CITY SCHOOLS

Board Reduces Coverage by $126,000 as Result of Razing of Simpson.

Because of the razing of the old John Simpson Junior high school building and removal of equipment to other buildings, the Mansfield board of education last night reduced its insurance on buildings and equipment by $126,000 and renewed insurance policies totaling $82,450.

The reductions were pro-rated among 37 agencies which have issued insurance on the city's schools.

The changes leave the school board with a total of $1,227,300 in insurance on its buildings and $181,600 on equipment and furnishings.

The board last night heard financial reports for the Senior high school and John Simpson Junior high cafeterias, submitted by Mrs. Frances Hypes, manager, showing that the Senior high cafeteria made a profit of $4.81 from Sept. 8 to Dec. 31 last year, while the junior high cafeteria, closed recently, lost $68 84.

The Senior high restaurant served 76,796 meals during the period at an average of 13.6 cents per meal. Total receipts were $11,958. The cafeteria completed the year with $1,346 in cash.

Dr. John H. Bristor, board clerk, reported that the board's relief fund, set up several years ago with an allocation of utility tax receipts from county commissioners, was exhausted. The board has no authority to set up more relief funds, Bristor said.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—(AP) —Mayor W. T. Wilson of Winston-Salem was under indictment today on a charge of embezzlement of guardianship funds.

SEES INCREASE IN SCHOOL CASH

Auditor Says Income for 1939 Will Be $25,000 More Than Figure for Last Year.

An additional $25,860 in operating funds for Mansfield schools in 1939 over the amount they received last year was seen today by County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe who estimated the schools' revenue from county tax sources will increase that much.

Despite the increase, the schools' budget must be pared $16,137 under the $561,997 the board of education asked for operation this year, the auditor's figures showed.

He said estimated school revenue for the year from all sources would be $544,960 as compared with $519,097 in 1938.

Most of the increased revenue for the year will come from higher tax valuations in the city, the auditor said.

To meet $5,800 in bills authorized at a meeting last night, the board was forced to borrow about $4,500 from its bond retirement fund.

The schools, however, were to receive $12,598 in personal tax receipts from the county to replenish their depleted general fund.

Dr. John H. Bristor, clerk, said the increase in revenue for 1939 would do little to help the schools since the new figure includes revenue which has already been used in tax advances.

Loses Appeal to City But Blind School Goes On

Thursday's session of Richland county's blind persons will be held at the Salvation Army hall as usual, despite the fact that WPA funds were cut off last week, according to teachers of the school.

Teachers will meet this afternoon with James Gordon, president of the Mansfield chapter of American Association of Teachers, to discuss means of raising the $400 necessary to carry on the school for two months.

Hope that the city might provide funds was abandoned today when City Solicitor Marion D. Ward informed Mayor Claude M. Hunter that the city was without authority to appropriate funds for such a purpose. Hunter had asked the solicitor last week to give him an opinion on the matter.

Mrs. Virginia Hall, one of the teachers, said today that the school, which is held every Thursday, would be continued for two weeks at least, with instructors working without pay if necessary.

The school has been a WPA project for the past two years.

SHERIFF TO RETURN PAIR

Sheriff E. P. Long was in Cleveland today to return two men to Mansfield to face charges of violating their probations by failing to provide for their families here. The pair, Charles Ricker and Kenneth Gallentine, were arrested by Cleveland police and held for county authorities. They had been placed on probation by Judge C. H. Huston.

Entertaining of Half Century Ago Revived at Class Party

MEMBERS of the Semper Fedelis class of South Main Street Evangelical church were carried back some 50 years in their memory last evening, when Mrs Earl Etzwiler and Mrs. Richard Hess entertained with an old-fashioned party.

The quaint affair was given at the Etzwiler home, 116 South Glenn avenue, which was transformed into a home of the 19th century by many antique pieces of furniture, lighted tapers and coal oil lamps.

Miss Mary Richey was the recipient of a prize for the best costume. Her dress, which was of the 1880 period, was fashioned of black and white polka-dotted taffeta Miss Richey wore a black cape and hat with a fluffy ostrich plume to complete her ensemble. She added a final note to her costume by wearing a pair of black bone-rimmed spectacles.

During the evening, the group looked at numerous pictures through an old-fashioned stereoscope and then played old-time games, such as button, button, and telephone.

The hostesses served a typically 19th century luncheon and presented the guests with favors in the class colors of delphinium blue and silver.

Mrs. Robert Herrold has invited the class members to her home on Sturges avenue for the next regular meeting, which will be held early in February.
